PREFACE.

The design of this little work—originally prepared for the use of the pupils of the High-school of Charleston, and now enlarged—is so obvious that it needs no explanation, and its utility is so evident that it needs no commendation; and while it is specially intended for school-boys, and contains nothing with which they ought not to be perfectly familiar, it will be found a convenient HAND-BOOK for those who have passed that grade.

The answers, it will be seen, are so constructed as to be independent of the questions; so that the book can be used for continuous recitation or catechetically, as the teacher may prefer.

In the Prosody the metres have been confined to hexameters and the metres of Horace, as when these are mastered, and the rules of prosody have been thoroughly committed and their application understood, other metres can be readily acquired as they present themselves.

The form in which the Rules for the Gender of Nouns is introduced will prove a master-key to that part of Latin Grammar. The rude jingle in which these rules are couched will only make them more attractive to boys, who will, for that very reason, commit them with more readiness and pleasure, and remember them more perfectly than if they possessed all the smoothness and elegance of the poetry of Tennyson or Longfellow.

The Synoptical Tables in the Appendix, showing case and tense-endings of the several declensions and conjugations, will prove very useful to the pupil, and will greatly aid him to obtain a comprehensive and exact conception of Latin; for if he has thoroughly learned the tabulated case and tense-terminals, by affixing them to the proper root a word may be easily carried through all its inflections.

The book has not been divided into lessons purposely, as this is best left to the teacher, who can apportion them according to the capacity and advancement of his pupils.

A MANUAL OF LATIN GRAMMAR.

ETYMOLOGY.

LETTERS.

1. What does Latin Grammar teach?

LATIN GRAMMAR teaches how to speak and write the Latin language correctly.

2. What are the letters of the Latin language?

The LETTERS of the Latin language are the same as those of the English, excepting k and w; w is not used at all, and k is used only in words that are strictly Greek.

3. How are these letters divided?

These letters are divided into vowels and consonants.

4. Name the vowels.

The VOWELS are a, e, i, o, u, and y.

5. Name the consonants.

The CONSONANTS are b, c, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, x, z; or, more briefly, all but the vowels.

6. How are the consonants divided?

The consonants are divided into mutes, liquids, and double consonants.

7. Which are the mutes, and why are they so called?

The MUTES are p, b, t, d, c, k, g, and are so called because, in combination with other letters, they tend to interrupt or stop the sound of the voice.

8. Which are the liquids, and why are they so called?

The LIQUIDS are l, m, n, r, and are so called because of the readiness with which they flow into other sounds, and the ease with which they are changed, one for another, in combining with other consonants.

9. Which are the double consonants, and why are they so called?

The DOUBLE CONSONANTS are j, x, z, and they are so called because they are each equal to two consonants; viz., j to dg, x to cs or gs, and z to ds.

10. How are h and s classed?

H is not regarded as a letter, but only as a rough breathing; and s is called a sibilant, or hissing, letter.

11. How are consonants classified as to sounds?

Consonants are classified as to sounds,

1. Into c sounds; viz., c, g, q.
2. Into p sounds; viz., p, b, f, v.
3. Into t sounds; viz., t, d.

12. What are letters of the same sound called, and what is their property?

Letters of the same sound are called cognate letters, and their property is that of being readily changed, one into another, in combination with other consonants.

13. What is a diphthong?

A DIPHTHONG is the union of two vowels in one sound.

14. How are diphthongs divided?

Diphthongs are divided into proper and improper.

15. What is a proper diphthong?

A PROPER DIPHTHONG is one in which both the vowels are sounded (see 17).

16. What is an improper diphthong?

AN IMPROPER DIPHTHONG is one in which only one of the vowels is sounded (see 18).

17. How many proper diphthongs are there?

There are three proper diphthongs: viz., au, eu, ei; as in aurum, euge, hei.

18. How many improper diphthongs are there?

There are two improper diphthongs: viz., æ and œ; as in pennæ, cœtus.

SYLLABLES.

19. What is a syllable?

A SYLLABLE is a distinct sound, uttered by a single impulse of the voice, forming the whole or part of a word.

20. What is a word of one syllable called? Of two syllables? Of three syllables? etc.

A word of one syllable is called a monosyllable; of two syllables, a dissyllable; of three syllables, a trisyllable; and of more than three syllables, a polysyllable.

21. What is the last syllable of a word called?

The last syllable of a word is called the ultimate or final.

22. What is the syllable before the last called?

The syllable before the last is called the penultimate or penult.

23. What is the syllable preceding the penult called?

The syllable preceding the penult is called the antepenult.

ACCENT.

24. What is accent?

ACCENT is a special stress or force of voice on a particular syllable of a word, by which that syllable is distinguished from the rest.

25. What are the three rules for accenting Latin words?

The three rules for accenting Latin words are:

1. In words of two syllables, the accent is always on the first; as in pu'er, ca'nis, do'mus.

2. In words of more than two syllables, if the penult is long, the accent is on the penult; as in honō'res, ami'cus.

3. If the penult is short, the accent is on the antepenult; as in dom'inus, hom'ines, op'era.

QUANTITY.

26. What is quantity?

QUANTITY is the measure of a syllable as respects the time required to pronounce it. Syllables are either long, short, or common, that is, sometimes long and sometimes short.

27. What are the four general rules for quantity?

The four general rules for the quantity of syllables are:

1. A diphthong is long; as, au in aurum, æ in famæ.
2. A vowel before another vowel is short; as, i in folium, e in dëorum.

3. A vowel before two single consonants or one double consonant (9) is long; as, o in möllis, a in ältus, e in rëx.

4. A vowel before a mute and a liquid is common in poetry, but in prose is short; as, volücris or volücris.

NOTE 1.—A short syllable is marked \cup ; a long, $-$ or \wedge ; \wedge is also sometimes placed over a contracted syllable; as deúm for deorum.

NOTE 2.—When a penult syllable is not marked, it comes under one of the above four rules.

WORDS.

28. What is a primitive word?

A PRIMITIVE WORD is one that is derived from no other word; as, püer, a boy; bönus, good; päter, a father.

29. What is a derivative word?

A DERIVATIVE WORD is one that is derived from another; as, pueritia, boyhood (from puer); bonitas, goodness (from bönus); patërnus, paternal (from pater).

30. What is a simple word?

A SIMPLE WORD is one that is not combined with another; as, püus, pious; äger, a field; dies, a day.

31. What is a compound word?

A COMPOUND WORD is one that is combined with another; as, impius (in and püus), agricultūra (äger and cultūra), meridies (medius and dies).

SUBSTANTIVES OR NOUNS.

32. What is a substantive or noun?

A SUBSTANTIVE or NOUN is the name of any person, place, or thing; as, Cicero, Roma, homo, liber.

33. What is a proper noun?

A PROPER NOUN is the name of an individual person or place; as, Cicero, Roma.

34. What is a common noun?

A COMMON NOUN is a name applied to all things of the same sort; as, vir, a man; dōmus, a house; liber, a book.

35. What is a collective noun, or noun of multitude?

A COLLECTIVE NOUN, or noun of multitude, is one which includes many in the singular number; as, populus, a people; exercitus, an army; classis, a fleet.

36. What is a patronymic noun?

A PATRONYMIC NOUN is one derived from the name of a father or ancestor; as, Priamides, a son or descendant of Priam; Æacides, a descendant of Æacus.

37. What is an abstract noun?

AN ABSTRACT NOUN is the name of a quality or state; as, bonitas, goodness, is the abstract of bōnus, good; ebrietas, drunkenness, is the abstract of ebrius, drunk.

PERSON AND GENDER.

38. How many persons have nouns, and how are they distinguished?

A noun has three persons: first, second, and third. The first speaks, the second is spoken to, and the third is spoken of.

39. How many genders are there?

There are three genders: masculine, denoting the male sex; feminine, denoting the female; and neuter, denoting neither male nor female. Nouns are sometimes said to be of common and doubtful genders.

40. When is a noun said to be of common gender?

A noun is of common gender when it denotes either a male or a female; as, conjux, a husband or wife; bos, an ox or a cow.

41. When is a noun said to be of doubtful gender?

A noun is of doubtful gender when it is sometimes masculine and sometimes feminine; as, fīnis, an end, masculine or feminine.

42. What is the distinction between the application of the terms common gender and doubtful gender?

The term common gender is applied to animate things which have sex, doubtful gender to inanimate things without sex.

43. Is the gender of a noun in Latin determined strictly by its being masculine or feminine, or neither?

The gender of a Latin noun is determined sometimes naturally by its signification, but for the most part grammatically by its termination.

GENDER RULES.

44. Repeat the following general rules for the gender of nouns determined by their signification:

I. What nouns denote a he are masculine;

But every she as female we decline.

II. Months, rivers, winds, and mountains pass for hēs;

Trees, countries, cities, isles, and herbs are shēs,

With gems, and ships that sail the seas.

NOTE.—For exceptions, see Appendix. In the Appendix will also be found general rules for the gender of nouns determined by their ending.

NUMBER AND CASE.

45. How many numbers have nouns?

Nouns have two numbers: the singular, denoting one; and the plural, denoting more than one.

46. What is case?

CASE is the relation in which a declinable word stands to some other word or words in a sentence.

47. How is case indicated?

The cases of nouns are indicated by a change of termination, called declension.

48. How many cases have Latin nouns?

Latin nouns have six cases; viz., nominative, genitive, dative, accusative, vocative, and ablative.

49. What does the nominative case denote?

The nominative case denotes simply the name of the person or thing of which something is affirmed.

50. What does the genitive case denote, and what is its sign?

The genitive case denotes origin, possession, or fitness. Its English sign is of.

51. What does the dative case denote, and what is its sign?

The dative case denotes that to or for which any thing is done. Its English sign is to or for.

52. What does the accusative case denote, and what is its sign?

The accusative case denotes the person or thing acted upon by something else. It is Englished, except in the case of the personal and relative pronouns, like the nominative.

53. What does the vocative case denote, and what is its sign?

The vocative case is used to denote the person or thing addressed. Its English sign is O or thou in the singular, and O or ye in the plural.

54. What does the ablative case denote, and what is its sign?

The ablative case denotes that from which something is taken away, or by or with which something is done. Its sign is in, with, from, by, etc.

DECLENSION.

55. What is declension?

DECLENSION is a change of termination, whereby the case and number of a declinable word are indicated.

56. What classes of words are declinable, and what indeclinable?

Nouns, pronouns, and adjectives, including participles, may be declined. Adverbs, prepositions, conjunctions, and interjections are indeclinable.

57. What are indeclinable words sometimes called?

Indeclinable words are sometimes called particles.

58. What is the change which verbs undergo called?

The change which verbs undergo is called conjugation.

59. How many declensions are there?

There are five declensions, called the first, second, third, fourth, and fifth declension.

60. How are the declensions distinguished from each other?

The declensions are distinguished from each other by the termination of the genitive singular. The first has æ, the second ī, the third īs, the fourth ūs, and the fifth ēi.

61. What is the root of a noun, and how is it obtained?

The root of a noun is the part which remains unchanged in declension. It is obtained from the genitive singular by cutting off the termination or final syllable of the word.

GENERAL RULES OF DECLENSION.

62. Repeat the four general rules of declension.

1. Nouns of the neuter gender have the accusative and vocative like the nominative in both numbers, and these cases, in the plural, end always in a.

2. The vocative, for the most part in the singular, and always in the plural, is like the nominative.

3. The dative and ablative plural are always alike.

4. Proper names have no plural, except several of the same name be spoken of; as, duodecim Cæsares, the twelve Cæsars.

FIRST DECLENSION.

63. How many terminations has the first declension?

The first declension has four terminations; viz., a, e, as, es. Only those in a are Latin; the rest are Greek.

64. What is the gender of nouns of the first declension?

Nouns of the first declension ending in a and e are feminine; those in as and es are masculine.

65. Repeat the gender rule for the first declension.

Nouns of the first declension end in a,
And pass for feminines; as, hæc mûsa.

NOTE.—In the gender rules, when a noun is said to have hic, it is masculine; hæc, feminine; hoc, neuter.

66. What are the case terminations of the first declension?

The case terminations of the first declension are seen in the following table of

TERMINATIONS OF THE FIRST DECLENSION.

SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
Nom.	ă,	Nom.	æ,
Gen.	æ,	Gen.	ārum,
Dat.	æ,	Dat.	is,
Acc.	am,	Acc.	as,
Voc.	ă,	Voc.	æ,
Abl.	ā.	Abl.	is.

67. What is the difference in quantity of the final a in the nominative and vocative, and the a in the ablative?

The final ă in the nominative and vocative is short; in the ablative, ā is long, as is shown by the accents.

Decline PENNA, a feather or pen.

SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
N. Penn-ă, a pen ;	N. Penn-æ, pens ;
G. Penn-æ, of a pen ;	G. Penn-ārum, of pens ;
D. Penn-æ, to or for a pen ;	D. Penn-is, to or for pens ;
Ac. Penn-am, a pen ;	Ac. Penn-as, pens .
V. Penn-ă, O or thou pen ;	V. Penn-æ, O or ye pens ;
A. Penn-ā, in, with, by a pen .	A. Penn-is, in, with, by pens .

In like manner decline the following nouns, repeating the rule for the gender, and giving the root of each (61):

Āl-a, a wing.	Mens-a, a table.
Aquīl-a, an eagle.	Regīn-a, a queen.
Cās-a, a cottage.	Rōs-a, a rose.
Făb-a, a bean.	Turb-a, a crowd.

68. What nouns in this declension make abus instead of is in the dative and ablative plural, and why?

The following nouns, asīna, a she ass; dea, a goddess; ēqua, a mare; filia and nāta, a daughter; and mūla, a she mule, make abus instead of is in the dative and ablative plural to distinguish them from masculines in us of the second declension.

69. Is this change always made?

Dea and filia always make abus; the others generally make is.

70. How are Greek nouns declined?

Decline nouns in as, es (if Greek), and in e;
As Ænēas, Anchīses, and Penelōpe.

GREEK NOUNS.

N. Ænē-as,	N. Anchīs-es,	N. Penelōp-e,
G. Ænē-æ,	G. Anchīs-æ,	G. Penelōp-es,
D. Ænē-æ,	D. Anchīs-æ,	D. Penelōp-æ,
Ac. Ænē-am or an,	Ac. Anchīs-en,	Ac. Penelōp-en,
V. Ænē-ă,	V. Anchīs-e,	V. Penelōp-e,
Ab. Ænē-ā.	Ab. Anchīs-e.	Ab. Penelōp-e.

SECOND DECLENSION.

71. How many terminations has the second declension?

The second declension has seven terminations, viz.:

FIVE MASCULINE: er, ir, ur, us, and os (os Greek).

TWO NEUTER: um and on (on Greek).

72. Are there no feminine nouns in the second declension?

The feminine nouns in the second declension are few in number, and chiefly derived from the Greek. The following

Latin nouns are feminine: alvus, the belly; hūmus, the ground; cōlus, a distaff; and vannus, a winnowing-fan.

73. Repeat the gender rule for masculines, second declension.

- (a) The second ends in er, ir, ur, and us,
And should be masculine, like domīnus.

Repeat the gender rule for feminine nouns.

- (b) Greek nouns in us are mostly feminine found;
With alvus, the belly, and hūmus, the ground,
Together with cōlus, a woman's distaff,
And vannus, a fan to winnow out chaff.

Repeat the gender rule for neuter nouns.

- (c) All nouns in um with neuters place,
And substantives that vary in no case;
Add vīrus, juice or poison, and pelāgus, the sea;
But vulgus hic et hoc its gender claims to be.

74. When the tree ends in us, in this declension, what is the termination of the noun denoting its fruit, and its gender?

The tree ends in us, and is feminine; the fruit ends in um, and is neuter. Thus:

Mālus, an apple-tree; mālum, an apple.
Pīrus, a pear-tree; pīrum, a pear, etc. But Fīcus means both a fig-tree and a fig.

75. What are the case terminations of the second declension?

The case terminations of the second declension are seen in the following table of

TERMINATIONS OF THE SECOND DECLENSION.

MASCULINE (and FEM.)			NEUTER.
	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.		SINGULAR.	PLURAL.

76. What is to be noticed as to the vocative of nouns in us?

The nominative in us, in the second declension, makes the vocative in e.

77. How do nouns in er, ir, and ur make the genitive?

Nouns in er, ir, and ur make the genitive by adding i to the nominative; as, puer, pueri, a boy; vir, viri, a man. But nouns in er sometimes drop e in the genitive; as, liber, libri, a book; āger, agri, a field; āper, apri, a boar.

Decline PUER, a boy, and AGER, a field, giving the rule for gender, and the root of each (44, 73 a, 61):

SINGULAR.		PLURAL.		SINGULAR.		PLURAL.
N.	puer,	puēr-i,		N.	ager,	agr-i,
G.	puēr-i,	puer-ōrum,		G.	agr-i,	agr-ōrum,

Ac.	puēr-um,	puēr-os,		Ac.	agr-um,	agr-os,
V.	puer,	puēr-i,		V.	ager,	agr-i,
Ab.	puēr-o.	puēr-is.		Ab.	agr-o.	agr-is.

Decline the following nouns, giving the rule for the gender and the root of each:

Hort-us, a garden .	Gēner, a son-in-law .	Līber, a book .
Fluvi-us, a river .	Sōcer, a father-in-law .	Āper, a boar .
Vent-us, the wind .	Lucifer, the morning star .	Cancer, a crab .

78. What are the only nouns in ir of this declension?

Vir, a man, and its compounds (as Decēmvir) are the only nouns in ir of the second declension.

79. Is there any noun in ur in this declension?

The only word in ur of the second declension is the masculine gender of the adjective satur, full.

Decline the neuter noun REGNUM, a kingdom.

SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
N. regn-um, a kingdom ;	regn-a, kingdoms ;
G. regn-i, of a kingdom ;	regn-ōrum, of kingdoms ;
D. regn-o, to or for a kingdom ;	regn-is, to or for kingdoms ;
Ac. regn-um, a kingdom ;	regn-a, kingdoms ;
V. regn-um, O or thou kingdom ;	regn-a, O or ye kingdoms ;
Ab. regn-o, in, with, by a kingdom .	regn-is, in, with, by kingdoms .

Decline the following neuter nouns, giving the general rule for declension (62, 1st), the rule for the gender (73 c), and the root of each:

Bell-um, war .	Ōv-um, an egg .	Præli-um, a battle .
Foli-um, a leaf .	Coll-um, a neck .	Tect-um, a roof .

VOCATIVE OF PROPER NAMES, ETC.

80. How do proper names in ius form their vocative?

Proper names in ius drop us in the vocative; as, Virgilius, Virgili; Horatius, Horāti; except Pius, which makes Pie.

81. What common nouns make the vocative in i? *

Filius, a son, and genius, a guardian angel, make the vocative fīli and gēni.

82. What is the vocative of deus and meus?

Deus makes deus, and meus, mi or meus, in the vocative.

83. What does deus make in the plural?

Deus, in the plural, more frequently makes dīi and dīis than dei and deis. Dīi and dīis are sometimes contracted into dī and dīs.

84. Is any other case in the second declension subject to contraction?

The genitive plural ōrum is sometimes contracted into ūm; as, deūm, liberūm, Danaūm, for deōrum, liberōrum, Danaōrum.

Decline DEUS, a god, making the contractions.

Ab.	Androge-o.	Dēl-o.

THIRD DECLENSION.

86. Are there many nouns of the third declension?

Nouns of the third declension are more numerous than those of all the other declensions put together. They are of all genders, and generally have more syllables in the oblique cases than in the nominative.

87. What are the terminations of the third declension?

The terminations of the third declension are too many to be enumerated. The final letters are thirteen; viz., a, e, o, u, y, c, d, l, n, r, s, t, x.

88. Repeat the general rule for masculine nouns of the third declension.

The third has males in er, or, os, n, o;
Long words are feminine in do and go.

89. Repeat the general rule for feminine nouns.

Third nouns in io mostly hæc procure,
With as, aus, es, is, x, and s impure.

90. What does the word "impure" mean in grammar?

Impure in grammar means after a consonant. Thus, s impure means s after a consonant; as, s in urbs, gens.

91. What is the general rule for neuters in the third declension?

Nouns ending in c, a, l, e, t (calet), ar, men, ur, and us, May with the neuter kind be placed by us.

92. What are the case terminations of the third declension?

The case terminations of the third declension may be seen in the following table of

TERMINATIONS OF THE THIRD DECLENSION.

MASCULINE AND FEMININE.		NEUTER.

FOURTH DECLENSION.

106. How many terminations has the fourth declension?

The fourth declension has only two terminations; viz., us, generally masculine, sometimes feminine; and u, neuter.

107. Repeat the general rule for the gender of nouns of the fourth declension?

The fourth in us are chiefly masculine;

But nouns in u as neuters we decline.

Porticus, tribus, mānus are feminine,

With cōlus, fīcus, dōmus; but these three

Both of the second and the fourth may be:

Cupressus, cornus, pīnus, such you'll see.

108. What are the case terminations of the fourth declension?

The case terminations of the fourth declension may be seen in the following table of

TERMINATIONS OF THE FOURTH DECLENSION.

109. What form does the dative, singular and plural, sometimes take in this declension?

The dative singular sometimes takes the form u instead of ui, and the plural ibus instead of ibus.

110. Repeat the list of nouns that make ibus in the dative plural.

Acus, arcus, portus, quercus,

Ficus, lăcus, artus,

Tribus, partus, et spēcu,

Pēcus adde vėru.

111. What nouns make ibus or ibus?

Gėnu, a knee; portus, a harbor; tonitrus, thunder; and vėru, a spit, make ibus or ibus.

112. What is the difference in the quantity of us final in the nominative and genitive of the fourth declension?

Us final in the nominative is short, in the genitive long. Plural cases in us are also long.

In like manner, decline the following nouns, giving the rule for the gender, and the root of each:

Cantus, a song.

Mănus, a hand.

Currus, a chariot.

Vėru, a spit.

Portus, a harbor.

Gėnu, a knee.

113. What is the peculiarity of dōmus?

114. What is the difference in signification of domūs and domi in the genitive singular:

In the genitive singular, domūs signifies of a house, and domi signifies at home, or of home.

FIFTH DECLENSION.

115. How many terminations has the fifth declension?

The fifth declension has only one termination, viz., es; as, res, a thing; dies, a day.

116. What is the gender of nouns of the fifth declension?

All nouns of the fifth declension are feminine, except dies, a day, which is masculine or feminine in the singular, and always masculine in the plural; and meridies, the mid-day, which is masculine, and has no plural.

117. Repeat the rule for the gender of nouns of the fifth declension.

The fifth are feminine, and end in es;

But one is masculine—meridies.

118. Are there many nouns of this declension?

There are only fifty-seven nouns of the fifth declension, and of these only two, res and dies, are complete in the plural. Most of them want the genitive, dative, and ablative plural, and many want the plural altogether.

119. What are the case terminations of the fifth declension?

The case terminations of the fifth declension may be seen in the following table of

VARIABLE NOUNS.

123. What is a variable noun?

A variable noun is one which varies in gender or declension, or in both. Those which vary in gender are called heterogeneous; those which vary in declension are called heteroclites.

124. Mention two of the most common heteroclites.

Jugĕrum, an acre, in the singular makes, Gen. jugĕri or -is; Abl. jugĕre; and in the plural, Nom. and Acc. jugĕra; Gen. jugĕrum; Abl. jugeribus. Vas, vassis, a vessel, makes the plural vasa, vasōrum.

125. The following lines contain the most common heterogeneous nouns. Repeat them:

Frĕnum and lĕcus, with rastrum and jĕcus,
Have frĕni and lĕci, with rastri and jĕci,
And frĕna and lĕca, with rastra and jĕca.

ADJECTIVES.

FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSIONS.

126. What is an adjective?

An adjective is a word used to qualify or describe a noun; as, vir bōnus, a good man; pulchra puella, a beautiful girl.

127. Of what declensions are adjectives?

Adjectives are either of the first and second declensions, or of the third only.

128. How do adjectives of the first and second declensions terminate?

Adjectives of the first and second declensions terminate in -us, -a, -um, or in -er, -a, -um; as, bōnus, bōna, bōnum; tēner, tenēra, tenērum.

Decline BONUS, good, and TENER, tender.

THIRD DECLENSION.

131. Into what three classes are adjectives of the third declension divided?

Adjectives of the third declension are divided into three classes:

First—Those which have only one termination for all the genders; as, fēlix, happy; prūdēns, prudent.

Second—Those which have two terminations, one for the masculine and feminine, and one for the neuter; as, mītis, mīte, mild; brēvis, brēvis, brēve, short.

Third—Those which have four terminations, two for the masculine, one for the feminine, and one for the neuter; as, ācer or acris, acris, acre; celēber or celēbris, celēbris, celēbre.

132. What does the second class include?

The second class includes all comparatives in ior, ior, ius; as, mitior, mitior, mitius, more mild or milder.

133. What does the third class include?

The third class includes adjectives which have two terminations for the masculine, one for the feminine, and one for the neuter; as, acer or ācris, acris, acre, sharp; celēber or celēbris, celēbris, celēbre, celebrated.

In like manner decline celeber or celebris, famous; volūcer, or volūcris, swift.

135. How do you know when an adjective ends in e or i, or i only, in the ablative?

Adjectives of one termination have e or i in the ablative. When the neuter ends in e, the ablative has i only. Participles have e oftener than i, and when used in the ablative absolute, only e.

NUMERAL ADJECTIVES.

136. What is a numeral adjective?

A NUMERAL ADJECTIVE is one that expresses number.

137. Into how many principal classes may numeral adjectives be divided?

Numeral adjectives may be divided into four principal classes; namely,

First—CARDINAL, which express number simply, or how many; as, ūnus, duo, tres, etc., one, two, three, etc.

Second—ORDINAL, denoting which one of a number; as, prīmus, secundus, tertius, etc., first, second, third, etc.

Third—DISTRIBUTIVES, which denote how many of each; as, bīni, two by two, or a pair; terni, three by three, or by threes, etc. These are used only in the plural.

Fourth—MULTIPLICATIVES, which denote how many fold; as, simplex, single; duplex, double; triplex, triple, etc.

138. Repeat the cardinals, the ordinals, and the distributives, up to twenty.

	CARDINAL. One, Two, etc.	ORDINAL. First, Second, etc.	DISTRIBUTIVE. One by One, etc.

19.	Novemdēcim,	Nōnus decīmus,	Novēni dēni,
20.	Viginti.	{ Vicesīmus, or } { Vigēsīmus. }	Vicēni.

139. Repeat the numbers for thirty, forty, etc., up to a hundred.

30.	Triginta,	{ Tricesīmus, or } { Trigesīmus, }	Tricēni,
40.	Quadraginta,	Quadragesīmus,	Quadragēni,
50.	Quinquaginta,	Quinquagesīmus,	Quinquagēni,
60.	Sexaginta,	Sexagesīmus,	Sexagēni,
70.	Septuaginta,	Septuagesīmus,	Septuagēni,
80.	Octoginta,	Octogesīmus,	Octogēni,
90.	Nonaginta,	Nonagesīmus,	Nonagēni,
100.	Centum.	Centesīmus.	Cetēni.

140. After the tens (beginning with twenty) how are the additional units expressed?

Twenty-one, twenty-two, etc., are expressed just as in English; thus, twenty-one, viginti ūnus; or one and twenty, ūnus et viginti, etc. After the hundreds, the conjunction is either used or omitted; as, centum ūnus, or centum et ūnus, a hundred and one.

141. What other way has the Latin of expressing eighteen, nineteen, twenty-eight, twenty-nine, etc., through the tens?

Eighteen, nineteen, etc., are sometimes expressed by subtracting the units from the tens; as, duo-de-viginti, eighteen; un-de-quingaginta, forty-nine, etc. Ordinals and distributives are formed in the same manner; as, undevicesimus, the nineteenth; duodevicesimi, etc.

142. What is the idiomatic use of prior and alter?

When only two are spoken of, prior is used for prīmus and alter for secundus.

143. Repeat the numbers for two hundred, three hundred, etc., up to a thousand.

	CARDINAL.	ORDINAL.	DISTRIBUTIVE.
200.	Ducenti,	Ducentesimus,	Ducēni,

147. Decline quatuor, quinque, etc.

The cardinal numbers from quatuor, four, to centum, a hundred, both included, are indeclinable.

148. How are the numbers from centum to mille declined?

The hundreds after centum are declined like the plural of bōnus: decent-i, -æ, -a; -ōrum, -ārum, -ōrum, etc.

149. How is mille declined?

Mille in the singular is indeclinable. In the plural it is declined like the plural of sedile (98): millia, millium, millibus, etc.

150. When is mille used as a noun, and when as an adjective?

Mille before a genitive plural is a noun; as, mille homīnum, a thousand (of) men; before a noun, in any other case, it is a plural adjective; as, mille homīnes, a thousand men.

151. How are ordinals declined?

Ordinals are declined like bōnus; as, prim-us, -a, -um, etc.

152. How are distributives declined?

Distributives are declined like the plural of bōnus; as, bīni, -æ, -a; bīnōrum, -ārum, -ōrum, etc.

153. To the foregoing, what other classes of adjectives expressing numbers may be added?

TEMPORALS, which express time; as, bīmus, two years old; trīmus, three years old, etc.; bīmestris and biennis, of two years' continuance; trīmestris, etc.

INTERROGATIVES; as, quot, how many? quōtus, of what number? quotěni, how many each? quoties (adv.), how many times?

CORRELATIVES.

154. What are correlatives?

Correlative words are such as have a reciprocal relation: that is, one implies the other; as, father and child, husband and wife. In the same way, tālis, such, implies quālis, as.

155. Mention some of the correlative adjectives.

The more common correlatives are

Tālis , such;	quālis , as.
Tantus , so great;	quantus , as.
Tōt , so many;	quot , as.
Totīdem , so many;	quot , as.
Tōtus , so great;	quōtus , as.

NUMERAL ADVERBS.

156. Repeat the numeral adverbs to twelve; also for twenty, thirty, a hundred, a thousand, etc.

Sēmel , once.	Tricies , thirty times.
Bis , twice.	Quadrages , forty times.
Ter , thrice.	Quinquages , fifty times.
Quāter , four times.	Centies , a hundred times.
Quinquies , five times.	Ducenties , two hundred times.
Sexies , six times.	Trecenties , three hundred times.
Septies , seven times.	Quadrings , four hundred times.
Octies , eight times.	Quingents , five hundred times.
Novies , nine times.	Millies , a thousand times.
Decies , ten times.	Bis millies , two thousand times.
Undecies , eleven times.	Ter millies , three thousand times.
Duodecies , twelve times.	Decies millies , ten thousand times.
Vicies , twenty times.	Vicies millies , twenty thousand times.

COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES.

157. What are the terminations of the comparative degree and what of the superlative degree of an adjective?

The regular comparative terminates in -ior, -ior, -ius; and the superlative in $\begin{cases} \textit{issimus, issima, issimum, or} \\ \textit{errimus, errima, errimum.} \end{cases}$

158. How are the comparative and superlative formed?

An adjective is regularly compared by adding to the root ior for the comparative and issimus for the superlative; as, alt-us, alt-ior, alt-issimus; fēlix, felic-ior, felic-issimus.

Compare DURUS, hard; BREVIS, short; AUDAX, brave.

POSITIVE.	COMPARATIVE.	SUPERLATIVE.
Dūr-us,	dur-ior,	dur-issimus.
Brēv-is,	brev-ior,	brev-issimus.
Audax,	audac-ior,	audac-issimus.

159. When the positive ends in er, how is the superlative formed?

When the positive ends in er, the superlative is formed by adding rimus to the positive; as, tēner, tenerior, tenerrimus.

Compare PAUPER, poor; PULCHER, fair; and CELER, swift.

POSITIVE.	COMPARATIVE.	SUPERLATIVE.
Pauper,	pauperior,	pauperrimus.
Pulcher,	pulchior,	pulcherrimus.
Cēler,	celerior,	celerrimus.

IRREGULAR AND DEFECTIVE COMPARISON.

160. Compare the following irregular adjectives:

163. How are compounds in dicus, ficus, loquus, and vōlus compared ?

Compounds in dicus, ficus, loquus, and vōlus are compared by entior and entissīmus: as,

POSITIVE.	COMPARATIVE.	SUPERLATIVE.
Benefīcus,	beneficentior,	beneficentissīmus,	beneficent.
Benevōlus,	benevolentior,	benevolentissīmus,	benevolent.
Magnilōquus,	magniloquentior,	magniloquentissīmus,	boasting.
Maledīcus,	maledicentior,	maledicentissīmus,	railing.
Mirifīcus,	mirificentior,	mirificentissīmus,	wonderful.

164. Compare the following, which want the positive:

COMPARATIVE.	SUPERLATIVE.
Deterior,	detrerrimus;	worse,	worst.
Ocior,	ocissimus;	swifter,	swiftest.
Prior,	primus;	former,	first.
Propior,	proximus;	nearer,	nearest.
Uterior,	ultimus;	farther,	farthest.

165. Compare the following, which want the comparative:

POSITIVE.	SUPERLATIVE.
Inclytus,	inclytissimus;	renowned,	most renowned.
Invictus,	invictissimus;	invincible,	most invincible.
Meritus,	meritissimus;	deserving,	most deserving.
Nup̄erus,	nuperrimus;	late,	latest.
Par,	parissimus;	equal,	—.
Sacer,	sacerrimus;	sacred,	most sacred.

166. Compare the following, which want the superlative:

POSITIVE.	COMPARATIVE.
Adolescens,	adolescentior	young,	younger.
Diuturnus,	diuturnior;	lasting,	more lasting.
Ingens,	ingentior;	huge,	huger.
Juv̄enis,	junior;	young,	younger.
Op̄imus,	opimior;	rich,	richer.
Pr̄onus,	pronior;	prone,	more prone.
S̄atur,	saturior;	full,	fuller.

167. How are youngest and oldest expressed?

Youngest is expressed by min̄imus natu, the least by birth; oldest by max̄imus natu, the greatest by birth.

168. What is to be remarked of anterior, sequior, nequam, and fr̄ugi?

Anterior, former, and sequior, worse, are found only in the comparative. N̄equam, worthless (indec.), has nequior, nequis̄imus. Fr̄ugi, frugal (indec.), has frugalior, frugaliss̄imus.

169. In what other way is comparison sometimes expressed?

Comparison is sometimes expressed by prefixing the adverbs māgis, more, and valde or maxīme, most, to the positive.

170. When is this form of comparison used?

The comparison by māgis and valde or maxīme is especially used when the adjective is of more than two syllables and a vowel comes before us in the nominative case; as, idoneus, fit; māgis idoneus, valde or maxīme idoneus: arduus, high; māgis arduus, valde or maxīme arduus.

171. What force does quam prefixed give to a superlative?

Quam prefixed to a superlative makes it emphatic; as, quam doctissimus, extremely learned; quam celerrīme, as speedily as possible.

PRONOUNS.

172. What is a pronoun?

A PRONOUN is a word used instead of a noun.

173. How many pronouns are there in Latin?

In Latin there are eighteen simple pronouns; namely, ēgo, tu, sui, substantive; ille, ipse, iste, hic, is, quis, qui, meus, tuus, suus, noster, vester, nostras, vestras, and cujas, adjective.

Decline EGO, TU, and SUI.

V.	—	V.	—
Ab.	se, in, with, by himself, etc.	Ab.	se, in, with, by themselves .

174. Why is sui called a reflexive pronoun?

Sui and its derived adjective pronoun, suus, are called reflexive because they refer to the principal subject of a sentence, which is generally the nominative to the leading verb.

175. How are the pronouns ego, tu, and sui rendered emphatic?

Ego is made emphatic by the addition of the particle met; as, egōmet, mēmēt: tu, by the addition of te or tēmet; as, tute, tutēmet: and se, by reduplication; as, sēse.

176. How is the preposition cum used with these pronouns?

In the ablative, with cum, cum is generally suffixed to the pronouns; as, mēcūm, tēcūm, sēcūm, nobiscūm, vobiscūm.

177. What is the difference in the use of the genitives plural, nostrūm, nostrī, and vestrūm, vestrī?

Nostrūm and vestrūm are used after partitives and interrogatives; as, nemo vestrūm, quis vestrūm? They are also the proper forms to be joined with omnium; as, omnium nostrum parens.

ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS.

POSSESSIVES.

178. What are possessive pronouns, and which are they?

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS denote possession. They are

Meus,	mea,	meum;	my , or mine (from me).
Tuus,	tua,	tuum;	thy , or thine (from tu).
Suus,	sua,	suum;	his , her , its own (from sui).
Noster,	nostra,	nostrum;	our , or ours (from nos).
Vester,	vestra,	vestrum;	your , or yours (from vos).

179. How are these declined?

Meus, tuus, and suus are declined like bōnus (128); noster and vester like āter (129).

DEMONSTRATIVES.

180. What are demonstrative pronouns, and which are they?

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS are such as point out precisely a person or thing already known. They are hic, this; ille, iste, is, that.

Decline Hic, this; ILLE, ISTE, and Is, that.

Hic, HÆC, Hoc, this. Plural, these.

Ab. eo,	ea,	eo.	eis, or iis,	eis, or iis,	eis, or iis.

181. What is the distinction between hic, iste, and ille as to personal application?

Hic refers to the person or thing nearest the speaker, and is called the demonstrative pronoun of the first person.

Iste refers to the person spoken to, or to something pertaining to him, and is called the demonstrative pronoun of the second person.

Ille refers to the person or thing spoken of, and is called the demonstrative pronoun of the third person.

182. When hic and ille are used, what is the distinction?

Hic refers to the person or thing nearest the speaker, or to what has just been spoken of; ille to the person or thing farthest from the speaker, or to what was formerly spoken of. This, however, is sometimes reversed.

183. What other peculiar use has ille?

Ille is used to indicate celebrity, and is then to be translated by "the"; as, Alexander ille magnus, Alexander the Great; Medæa illa, the celebrated Medea.

184. Of what is idem, the same, compounded, and how is it declined?

Idem, the same, is compounded of is and the syllable dem; m is changed into n before dem for euphony or easiness of pronunciation. It is thus declined:

RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

186. What is a relative pronoun?

A RELATIVE PRONOUN is one that refers to some person or thing mentioned before, which is called its antecedent.

Decline the relative pronoun QUI.

QUI, QUÆ, QUOD, who, which, or that. Relative.

V. —	—	—	—	—	—
Ab. quō,	quā,	quō.	queis, or	quībus,	etc.

187. What is to be remarked of quīs and quī with the circumflex accent?

Quīs with the circumflex accent is sometimes used for queis or quībus, and quī with the same accent for the ablative singular in all genders, and sometimes, though rarely, for the ablative plural.

INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

188. What is an interrogative pronoun?

An INTERROGATIVE PRONOUN is one that is used to ask questions.

Decline the interrogative QUIS.

QUIS, QUÆ, QUID, or QUOD, who? which? what?

V. —	—	—	—	—	—
Ab. quō,	quā,	quō.	queis, or	quībus,	etc.

189. What is the difference between quis and qui, and quid and quod, as interrogatives?

Quis and quid, as interrogatives, are used as substantives; qui and quod as adjectives. Quis and quid, however, are sometimes used adjectively.

190. Mention some other interrogative pronouns.

Quisnam? who? what?	Numquis? is any one?
Quinam? which? what?	Cujus? whose?
Ecquis? or ecquisnam? is any one?	Cujas? of what country?

191. How are these declined?

Those compounded of quis or qui are declined like the simple words of which they are compounded, the prefix or suffix remaining unchanged. Cujus, which is defective, is declined like bōnus, and cujas like an adjective of one termination: Gen. cujātis; Dat. cujāti, etc.

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

192. What are indefinite pronouns?

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS are such as point out persons or things indefinitely: that is, they indicate no particular person or thing.

193. Mention some of the indefinite pronouns.

The following are some of the indefinite pronouns. They are all compounds of quis or qui. Qui is always put first; quis is sometimes first and sometimes last.

Aliquis, some one.	Quicunque, whoever, whosoever.
Quisque, each, every.	Unusquisque, each one.
Quisquis, whoever, whosoever.	Quīdam, a certain one.
Quisquam, any one.	Quilibet, } any one you please.
Quispiam, some one.	Quīvis, }

194. How are these declined?

All the compounds of quis or qui are declined like quis or qui, the prefix or suffix being unchanged. In unusquisque both unus and quis must be inflected; thus, Gen. unuscujusque; Dat. unicuique, etc.

NOTE.—Aliquis makes aliqua in the feminine.

195. What euphonic change is made in quidam?

In quidam, m is changed to n when it comes before dam; as quendam instead of quemdam.

196. What is to be noted of nequis, numquis, and siquis?

Nēquis, numquis, and sīquis are always compound pronouns, though commonly they are written separately; as, ne quis, num quis, si quis.

VERBS.

197. What is a verb?

A VERB is a word that affirms existence or a state of being; as, sum, I am; sēdeo, I sit: or an act performed; as, āmo, I love; lēgo, I read: or an action received; as, doceor, I am taught; vapūlo, I am beaten.

198. What is the person or thing of which the affirmation is made called, and in what case is it put?

The person or thing of which the affirmation is made is called the subject, and is put in the nominative case; as, puer amat, the boy loves. Here puer is the subject (382).

199. What is the verb called in relation to the subject?

The verb in relation to the subject is called the predicate; as, puer amat, the boy loves. Here amat is the predicate (382).

200. Is the subject of a verb always in the nominative and the verb itself personal?

In certain constructions, the subject is in the accusative and the verb in the infinitive, preceded by another verb; as, dicit se scribēre, he says that he is writing. Here se is the accusative subject of scribēre.

201. Into what different classes are verbs divided?

Verbs are divided into regular, irregular, transitive, intransitive, deponent, common, neuter passive, defective, and impersonal verbs.

202. What is a regular verb?

A REGULAR VERB is one that is formed and inflected according to certain rules.

203. What is an irregular verb?

An IRREGULAR VERB is one that, in some of its parts, deviates in formation and inflection from a regular verb.

204. What is a transitive verb?

A TRANSITIVE VERB is one in which the action passes (transit) from the doer or subject to some other person or thing called the object; as, puer amat parentes, the boy loves his parents. Here parentes is the object of amat.

205. What is an intransitive verb?

An INTRANSITIVE VERB is one in which the action does not pass (in, or non, transit) from the doer or subject to some other person or thing; as, ambulo, I walk; curro, I run.

206. What is a deponent verb?

A DEPONENT VERB is one which has a passive form, but an active signification; as, loquor, I speak; utor, I use. It is so called because it (depōnit) lays aside the active form.

207. What are common verbs?

COMMON VERBS are those which under a passive form have an active or passive signification; as, crimīnor, I accuse, or I am accused.

208. What are neuter passive verbs?

NEUTER PASSIVE VERBS are those which in form are partly active and partly passive; as, audeo, I dare; gaudeo, I rejoice. The passive forms are the perfect and the tenses derived from it.

209. What are defective verbs?

DEFECTIVE VERBS are such as want some of their parts. Aio, I affirm, and inquam, I say, are defective verbs.

210. What are impersonal verbs?

IMPERSONAL VERBS are those which are used only in the third person singular; as, dēcet, it behoves; licet, it is allowed.

211. Into what further classes may verbs be subdivided?

Verbs may be further subdivided into

1. Frequentative verbs, which denote repeated action. These end in ito, and are all of the first conjugation; as, clāmīto (freq. of clāmo), I cry frequently.

2. Inceptive verbs, which mark the beginning of an action. These end in asco, esco, or isco, and are of the third conjugation; as, labasco (from lābo), I begin to fall—I totter; calesco (from caleo), I grow hot; tremisco (from trēmo), I begin to tremble.

3. Desiderative verbs, which signify a desire or intention to do a thing. These end in urio, and are of the fourth conjugation; as, cœnaturio (from cœno), I want my supper; nupturio (from nūbo, nuptum), I desire to marry.

4. Diminutives, which represent an action as little or trifling. These end in illo, and are of the first conjugation; as, cantillo (from canto), I hum a tune; sorbillo (from sorbeo), I sip.

5. Intensives, which denote eagerness of action. These are few in number, and end in sso; as, facesso (from facio), I do eagerly; petesso or petisso (from pēto), I strive after.

VOICE.

212. How many voices are there in Latin?

In Latin there are two voices: the active, which represents the subject as acting, and the passive, which represents the subject as being acted upon; as, active voice, āmo, I love; passive voice, āmor, I am loved.

MOODS.

213. What is mood?

MOOD is the mode or manner of expressing the action or state of the verb.

214. How many moods has a Latin verb?

A Latin verb has four moods; namely, the indicative, subjunctive, imperative, and infinitive.

215. How is the indicative mood used?

The indicative mood is used simply to assert a fact; as, amat, he loves: or to ask a question; as, amatne, does he love? It is sometimes also used in a conditional clause, when the condition is admitted as a fact; as, si vāles, bēne est, if you are in good health, it is well.

216. How is the subjunctive mood used?

The subjunctive mood is used to express the state or act of a verb, not as a fact, but as a possibility, including power, liberty, duty, and obligation. It is used in dependent clauses (380) after certain conjunctions, or independently and without a conjunction as a softened imperative.

217. How is the imperative mood used?

The imperative mood is used for commanding, exhorting, or entreating.

218. How is the infinitive mood used?

The infinitive mood is used to express the state or act of the verb in an unlimited manner; that is, without any restriction as to person or number.

TENSES.

219. What is tense?

TENSE means time, and is used to distinguish the state or action of a verb in this respect.

220. How many tenses are there?

There are six tenses; namely, present, imperfect, perfect, pluperfect, future, and future perfect.

221. Into what two classes are tenses divided?

Tenses are divided into two classes, primary and secondary.

222. How are these tenses used?

The primary tenses are used to express actions as present or future; the secondary, those which are past.

223. Which are the primary tenses, and which the secondary?

The Primary Tenses are,	The Secondary Tenses are,
Present,	Imperfect,
Perfect definite ,	Perfect indefinite ,
Futures.	Pluperfect.

224. For what is the present tense used?

The present tense is used to express an action that is now going on; as, āmo, I love, do love, or am loving.

225. For what is the imperfect tense used?

The imperfect tense is used to express an action as past, but not completed; as, amābam, I loved, did love, or was loving: also for repeated or customary actions in past time; as, equitābam, I used to ride.

226. How is the perfect definite used?

The perfect definite is used to represent an action as past and completed, but with reference to the present: its sign is have; as, amāvi, I have loved.

227. How is the perfect indefinite used?

The perfect indefinite is used to express an action simply as past and completed, without any reference to the present; as, amāvi, I loved, or I did love. This is sometimes called the aorist perfect.

228. Has the Latin two forms of the perfect?

There is but one form for the perfect. Whether the perfect is definite or indefinite is determined by the connection.

229. How is the pluperfect tense used?

The pluperfect tense is used to express an action as past and completed before some other past action: its sign is had; as, amavēram, I had loved.

230. How is the future tense used?

The future tense is used to express an action that will take place in some future time: its sign is shall or will; as, amābo, I shall or will love.

231. How is the future perfect used?

The future perfect is used to express an action that will be completed before some other future action or event: its sign in the first person is shall have; in the second person will have: as, amavĕro, I shall have loved; amavĕris, thou wilt have loved, etc.

ENGLISH OF THE SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

232. In the subjunctive mood, what is the sign of the present tense?

In the subjunctive mood the sign of the present tense is may or can; as, āmem, I may or can love. With a conjunction, it is often rendered by the present indicative; as, si āmem, if I love. Without a conjunction, in an independent clause (380), it is used as a softened imperative; as, āmem, let me love.

233. What is the sign of the imperfect tense?

The sign of the imperfect subjunctive is might, could, would, should; as, amārem, I might, could, would, or should love. With a conjunction, it often takes the indicative meaning; as, si amārem, if I loved.

234. What is the sign of the perfect tense?

The sign of the perfect subjunctive is may have; as, amavĕrim, I may have loved. With adjuncts, its meanings are so modified that they may be best learned by practice.*

235. What is the sign of the pluperfect?

The sign of the pluperfect subjunctive is might, could, would, or should have; as, amavissem, I might, could, would, or should have loved. This tense, like the perfect, is variously rendered.

236. What is the sign of the future subjunctive?

There is no future tense in the subjunctive mood.

* The attention of the pupil should be directed to the practice of the best writers in the Latin language in the use of both the perfect and pluperfect tenses.

ENGLISH OF THE IMPERATIVE AND INFINITIVE.

237. Give the English of the imperative.

SINGULAR.

PLURAL.

2d Person, Love thou, or do thou love,	Love ye, or do ye love,
3d Person, Let him love ;	Let them love.

238. Give the infinitive meanings.

Pres. To love. Perf. To have loved. Fut. To be about to love.

INFINITIVE WITH AN ACCUSATIVE SUBJECT.

239. What modification of meaning does the infinitive undergo when it has an accusative subject before it?

With an accusative subject before it, the infinitive takes the meaning of a personal verb, and its time from the tense of the verb by which it is preceded. Thus,

PRESENT after a

PRESENT: dicat se amāre, he says that he loves, does love, or is loving.PAST: dixit se amāre, he said that he loved, did love, or was loving.

PERFECT after a

PRESENT: dicat se amavisse, he says that he loved, did love, or has loved.PAST: dixit se amavisse, he said that he had loved.

FUTURE after a

PRESENT: dicat se amatūrum fuisse, he says } that he would have loved.PAST: dixit se amatūrum fuisse, he said }

PARTICIPLES.

240. How many participles has a Latin verb, and how are they Englished?

A Latin verb has four participles, which terminate and are Englished thus:

ACTIVE. { PRESENT: ns; as, amans, loving.
 { FUTURE in rus; as, amatūrus, { about to love, or going to { love.

PASSIVE. { PERFECT: tus; as, amatus, loved, or being loved.
 { FUTURE in dus; as, amandus, { to be necessary, worthy, or { proper to be loved.

241. What participles are wanting in Latin?

The Latin has no perfect participle active nor present passive.

242. How is the perfect participle supplied?

The perfect participle active is supplied either (1) by the perfect passive in the case absolute, or (2) by quum with the pluperfect subjunctive; as,

(1) Cæsar, his dictis, profectus est—Cæsar, these things being said (or having said these things), departed.

(2) Cæsar, quum hæc dixisset, etc.—Cæsar, when he had said (or having said) these things, etc.

243. How is the perfect participle passive supplied?

The perfect participle passive is often used in a present sense; as, amatus, loved, or being loved.

244. How is the perfect participle of a deponent verb Englished?

The perfect participle of a deponent verb is Englished by having; as, loquutus, having spoken; pollicitus, having promised.

GERUNDS—GERUNDIVES—SUPINES.

245. What is a gerund?

A GERUND is a verbal noun, used only in the singular number, nominative and vocative wanting. It is Englished, like the present participle active, by ing; as, amandi, of loving, etc.

246. What is a gerundive?

The participle in dus, when used as a gerund, is called a gerundive.

247. What is a supine, how many are there, and how rendered?

A SUPINE is a verbal noun of the fourth declension, used only in the accusative and ablative singular. There are two supines, called the former and latter. The former is Englished like the present infinitive active, and the latter like the present infinitive passive. Thus,

Former Supine, amātum, to love.

Latter Supine, amātu, to be loved.

CONJUGATION.

248. What do you mean by the conjugation of a verb?

The CONJUGATION OF A VERB is the arrangement of its moods, tenses, voices, numbers, and persons according to a certain order.

249. How many conjugations are there, and how are they distinguished?

There are FOUR CONJUGATIONS of verbs, distinguished from each other by the vowel before re of the infinitive:

The FIRST has ā before re; as, amāre, to love.

The SECOND has ē before re; as, monēre, to warn.

The THIRD has ě before re; as, regěre, to rule.

The FOURTH has ī before re; as, audīre, to hear.

250. Give the regular terminations of the principal parts of the four conjugations.

	PRESENT INDICATIVE.	PRESENT INFINITIVE.	PERFECT INDICATIVE.	FIRST SUPINE.
First:	-o,	-āre,	-āvi,	-ātum.
Second:	-eo,	-ēre,	-ui,	-ītum.
Third:	{-o, or -io, }	-ěre,	{-i, or -si,	-tum, or -sum.
Fourth:	-io,	-īre,	-īvi,	-ītum.

251. What remark may be made as to the terminations of the perfects and supines of the third conjugation?

The perfects and supines of the third conjugation are so modified by the connecting letters and the changes which they undergo in combination that they can not be briefly specified. They are most readily learned by practice.

252. Conjugate a regular verb in each of the four conjugations.

- | | | | | | |
|----|-----------|----------|----------|-----------|----------|
| 1. | Am-o, | am-āre, | amāv-i, | amāt-um, | to love. |
| 2. | Mon-eo, | mon-ēre, | monu-i, | monīt-um, | to warn. |
| 3. | { Rēg-o, | reg-ěre, | rex-i, | rect-um, | to rule. |
| | { Cap-io, | cap-ěre, | cēp-i, | capt-um, | to take. |
| 4. | Aud-io, | aud-īre, | audīv-i, | audīt-um, | to hear. |

253. How many roots has a verb, and how are they obtained?

A verb has three roots. The first is obtained by cutting off re of the infinitive with the vowel before it; the second, by cutting off i from the perfect; and the third, by cutting off um from the supine.

254. Name the roots of āmo, monco, rēgo, cāpio, and audio?

	FIRST ROOT.	SECOND ROOT.	THIRD ROOT.
AMO :	am-,	amāv-,	amāt-.
MONEO :	mon-,	monu-,	monīt-.
REGO :	reg-,	rex-,	rect-.
CAPIO :	cap-,	cēp-,	capt-.
AUDIO :	aud-,	audīv-,	audīt-.

255. Enumerate the tenses formed from the different roots, as shown in the following table:

	FIRST ROOT.	SECOND ROOT.	THIRD ROOT.

256. How are the different parts of the verb formed from these roots?

The manner in which the different parts of the verbs are formed from the roots is seen from the following

SYNOPTICAL TABLE OF FORMATION OF THE TENSES (ACTIVE VOICE).

FIRST ROOT.
INDICATIVE.			SUBJUNCTIVE.		IMPERAT.	INFI.	PARTICIPLE.			GER-UND.

2. Monit-			-ūrus, -ūra, -ūrum,		-um.
3. Rect-
4. Audit-

257. Do verbs in io, of the third conjugation, terminate in every respect like rēgo?

Verbs in io, of the third conjugation, are irregular in their formation from the first root. They terminate like verbs of the fourth conjugation in the imperfect and future indicative, present subjunctive, present participle active, future participle passive, and gerund.

258. How are the tenses of the passive voice formed?

The tenses of the passive voice are formed directly from those of the active by adding r to any tense ending in o, or changing the final m of any tense into r for the passive, except in the compound tenses, as may be seen in the following

SYNOPTICAL TABLE OF FORMATION OF THE TENSES (PASSIVE VOICE).

FIRST ROOT.

INDICATIVE.			SUBJUNCTIVE.		IMPERATIVE.	INFIN.	PARTICI.

3. Rēg-or,	-ēbar,	-ar,	-ar,	-ērer,	-ēre or -ītor,	-i,	-endus.
4. Aud-ior,	-iēbar,	-iar,	-iar,	-īrer,	-īre or -ītor,	-īri,	-iendus.

259. What tenses in the passive are compound?

The compound tenses in the passive are all the perfects and pluperfects, the future perfect, and the future infinitive.

260. How are the compound tenses formed?

The compound tenses are formed of the perfect participle passive and some part of the verb sum. The future infinitive, however, is formed of the first supine and iri.

261. Repeat the compound tenses as exhibited in the following

SYNOPTICAL TABLE OF THE COMPOUND TENSES (PASSIVE VOICE).

262. Is there any compound tense in the active voice?

There is one compound tense in the active voice, namely, the future infinitive, which is formed of the future participle in rus, with esse or fuisse. Thus,

Amatūrus	} esse, or fuisse.
Monitūrus
Rectūrus
Auditūrus

263. In the formation of verbs, what will it be useful to remember?

It will be useful to remember (1) That in the first and second conjugations the future indicative ends in bo (ābo, ēbo), the third in am (īam), and the fourth in īam. (2) That the imperfect subjunctive of any verb is formed by adding m (pass. r) to the infinitive. (3) That the imperative active is formed by cutting off re from the infinitive. (4) That the imperative passive is the same in form as the infinitive active. (5) That the present infinitive passive of the third conjugation is formed by changing or or ior of the present into i.

264. What are the personal terminations?

The personal terminations, except of the perfect, are

ACTIVE VOICE.		PASSIVE VOICE.
SINGULAR.	PLURAL.	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
1. m (o),	mus.	1. r,	mur.
2. s,	tis.	2. ris, or re,	mīni.
3. t,	nt.	3. tur,	ntur.

265. In regard to personal terminations, what will it be useful to remember?

In the personal terminations it will be useful to remember (1) that if a person ends in s (except mus) it is a second person; (2) that the third person singular ends in t, and the plural in nt, and that these are made passive by the addition of ur; as, amat, amant, amatur, amantur.

266. What are the personal terminations of the perfect indicative active?

The personal terminations of the perfect indicative active are

	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
1.	i,	īmus.
2.	isti,	istis.
3.	it,	ērunt, or ēre.

267. What are the terminations of the imperative?

The terminations of the imperative are

	3. antor;	entor;	untor;	iuntor.

THE IRREGULAR VERB "SUM."

268. What is the irregular verb sum sometimes called?

The irregular verb sum is sometimes called a substantive verb, because it denotes being or simple existence; and sometimes an auxiliary or helping verb, because it is used as an auxiliary or help in inflecting some of the tenses of the passive voice.

269. Conjugate the verb SUM, to be.

DEPONENT VERBS.

275. How are deponent verbs formed and conjugated?

DEPONENT VERBS are formed and conjugated like the passive voice of regular verbs of the same conjugation, but they take their signification from the active voice. Thus,

Miror, to admire (dep., first conj.), like āmor. (270.)

Polliceor, to promise (dep., second conj.), like monēor. (271.)

Utor, to use (dep., third conj.), like rēgor. (272.)

Metior, to measure (dep., fourth conj.), like audior. (274.)

NEUTER PASSIVE VERBS.

276. How are neuter passive verbs formed and conjugated?

NEUTER PASSIVE VERBS, according as their tenses are active or passive in form, are formed and conjugated like the active or passive voice of the same tenses of the conjugation to which they belong.

277. What tenses take the passive form?

The tenses of neuter passive verbs which take the passive form are the perfect and pluperfect, in both the indicative and subjunctive moods, also the future perfect and perfect infinitive. The neuter passive verb audeo, I dare, forms the tenses as follows:

Ind. Perf. , ausus sum, or fui,	Subj. Pres. , ausus sim, or fuērim,
Ind. Plup. , ausus eram, or fuēram,	Subj. Plup. , ausus essem, or fuissem,
Fut. Perf. , ausus ero, or fuēro,	Inf. Perf. , ausus esse, or fuisse.

278. Are there many verbs of this class?

There are only four neuter passive verbs; three of the second conjugation, and one of the third—namely,

Second conj. ,	audeo,	audēre,	ausus,	to dare.
Second conj. ,	gaudeo,	gaudēre,	gavīsus,	to rejoice.
Second conj. ,	soleo,	solēre,	solītus,	to be accustomed.
Third conj. ,	fīdo,	fidēre,	fīsus,	to trust.

PERIPHRASTIC CONJUGATION.

279. What is the periphrastic conjugation?

The periphrastic conjugation in Latin is a combination of the future participles in rus and in dus with the verb sum. The former constitutes the periphrastic conjugation active, and the latter the periphrastic conjugation passive.

280. What is the signification of these conjugations?

The combination of the future in rus with sum implies an immediate future; as, amatūrus sum, I am about or going to love immediately, or very soon.

The combination of the future in dus with sum implies worthiness or desert; as, amandus sum, I am worthy to be, deserve to be, or ought to be loved.

281. Repeat the tenses of these two conjugations?

FIRST PERIPHRASTIC CONJUGATION.

Perfect, amatūrus fuisse.

SECOND PERIPHRASTIC CONJUGATION.

Present, amandus sum,
Imperfect, amandus eram, } etc., like the first.
Future, amandus ero,

IRREGULAR VERBS.

282. Which are the irregular verbs?

The IRREGULAR VERBS are commonly reckoned six; namely, sum, vōlo, fěro, ědo, fīo, eo, and their compounds.

283. Of what are prosum and possum compounded?

Prōsum, to do good, is compounded of prō, for, and sum, I am. Possum, to be able, is compounded of pōtis, able, and sum, I am, contracted into possum.

284. Of what are nōlo and mālo compounded?

Nōlo, I am unwilling, and mālo, I am more willing, are compounds of vōlo. The former is compounded of non and vōlo, contracted into nōlo, and the latter of māgis and vōlo, contracted into mālo.

285. Where and why does prosum insert d?

Prōsum inserts d where the simple verb begins with e, for euphony, or easiness of pronunciation.

286. Proceed now to conjugate the irregular verbs prōsum, possum, etc.

PROSUM, PRODESSE, PROFUI, to do good.

DEFECTIVE VERBS.

296. What are defective verbs?

DEFECTIVE VERBS are those in which some of their parts are wanting.

297. What defective verbs are termed præteritive, and why?

Odi, I hate; cæpi, I begin; memīni, I remember, are called præteritive verbs, because they are used only in the præterite (perfect) tense, and the tenses derived from it.

298. What significations has cæpi?

Cæpi has a present as well as a perfect signification, and an imperfect as well as a pluperfect meaning, and also a future as well as a future perfect meaning; thus,

Perfect, cæpi, I begin, or I have begun;

Pluperfect, cæpĕram, I began, or I had begun;

Fut. Perfect, cæpĕro, I shall begin, or I shall have begun.

299. What significations have odi and memīni?

Odi and memīni have the meanings only of the present, imperfect, and future; thus, odi, I hate; odĕram, I hated; odĕro, I shall or will hate.

SYNOPSIS OF THE PRÆTERITIVE VERBS.

Odi, odĕram, odĕro, odĕrim, odissem, odisse.

Participles, ōsus, osūrus.

Cæpi, cæpĕram, cæpĕro, cæpĕrim, cæpisse, cæpisse.

Participles, cæptus, cæptūrus.

Memīni, meminĕram, meminĕro, meminĕrim, meminissem, meminisse.

Imperative, memento, mementôte.

300. How is the perfect nōvi, from nosco, used?

The perfect nōvi, from nosco, I know, is used præteritively, and, like odi and memīni, has the sense only of the present, imperfect, and future: I know, I have known, I shall know.

301. Repeat the

SYNOPSIS OF NŌVI, WITH THE CONTRACTIONS.

Nōvi, { novĕram, } novĕro; { novĕrim, novissem, novisse,
 { nōram, } { nōrim, nōssem, nōsse.

302. What is to be remarked as to do, to give, and fāri, to speak?

Do is not used in the first person passive, either in the indicative or subjunctive; that is, it has neither dor nor der. Fāri is used chiefly by the poets, and principally in the third person singular fātur, the imperative fare, the participle fātus, the genitive and ablative gerund fandī, fando, and supine fātu.

303. What is the difference between aio, I say, and inquam, I say?

Aio, I say, means I affirm; inquam, I say, is used only in quotations, and is always interposed between some part of the quotation; as, "Quæ nunc tellus," inquit, "quæ me æquora," etc.

304. Conjugate aio, inquam, fōrem, etc.

305. For what are ausim, faxim, and faxo used?

Ausim is used for ausērim, from audeo, I dare; faxim and faxo for fecērim and fecēro, from facio.

306. For what are sīs, sultis, and sōdes used?

Sīs, sultis, and sōdes are contractions of the conjunction si and a verb; as, sis for si vis; sultis for si vultis; and sōdes for si audes, with the meaning, I pray you.

IMPERSONAL VERBS.

307. What are impersonal verbs?

IMPERSONAL VERBS are those which are used only in the third person singular. They have no nominative, and are translated with the English pronoun it before them; as, delectat, it delights; contingit, it happens.

308. Repeat the synopsis of the impersonal verbs delectat, dēcet, contingit, and evēnit.

	FIRST CONJ.	SECOND CONJ.	THIRD CONJ.	FOURTH CONJ.
Ind. Present ,	delectat,	dēcet,	contingit,	evēnit,
Ind. Imperf. ,	delectābat,	decēbat,	contingēbat,	eveniēbat,
Ind. Future ,	delectābit,	decēbit,	continget,	eveniet,
Ind. Perfect ,	delectāvit,	decuit,	contīgīt,	evēnit,
Ind. Pluperf. ,	delectavērat,	decuērat,	contigērat,	evenērat,
Ind. F. Perf. ,	delectavērit.	decuērit.	contigērit.	evenērit.
Subj. Present ,	delectet,	deceat,	contingat,	eveniat,
Subj. Imperf. ,	delectāret,	decēret,	contingēret,	eveniēret,
Subj. Perfect ,	delectavērit,	decuērit,	contigērit,	evenērit,
Subj. Pluperf. ,	delectavisset.	decuisset.	contigisset.	evenisset.
Inf. Present ,	delectāre,	decēre,	contingēre,	eveniēre,
Inf. Perfect ,	delectavisse.	decuisse.	contigisse.	evenisse.

309. What should be noticed as to the verb evēnit?

In evēnit it should be noticed that the penult of the present is short, while that of the perfect is long; as, evēnit, evēnit. This affects the pronunciation, (see 25, 2d, 3d).

310. Is a verb, not impersonal in itself, ever used impersonally?

Most Latin verbs may be used impersonally in the passive voice, especially intransitive verbs, which otherwise have no passive; as, pugnātur, it is fought; favētur, it is favored; curritur, it is run; venītur, it is come.

311. How may impersonal verbs be applied to any person or number?

Impersonal verbs may be applied to any person or number by placing after them the personal pronouns in the case which the verb, used personally, governs.

312. Exemplify this in the use of delectat and plācet?

Delectat, as a personal verb, governs the accusative; therefore, impersonally, we say delectat me, te, illum, etc., it delights me, thee, him, etc.; or I delight, thou delightest, he delights, etc. Plācet, in the same way, governs the dative; therefore we say placet mihi, tibi, illi, etc., it pleases me, thee, him, etc., or I please, thou pleasest, he pleases, etc.

313. When intransitive verbs are used impersonally in the passive voice, how may they be applied to any person or number?

Intransitive verbs used impersonally in the passive voice may be applied to any person or number by placing after them the personal pronouns in the ablative case, governed by the prepositions a or ab (ab when the pronoun begins with a vowel).

314. Illustrate this use in pugnātur.

Pugnātur a me, it is fought by me, or I fight.
Pugnātur a te, it is fought by thee, or thou fightest.
Pugnātur ab illo, it is fought by him, or he fights.
Pugnātur a nobis, it is fought by us, or we fight.
Pugnātur a vobis, it is fought by you, or you fight.
Pugnātur ab illis, it is fought by them, or they fight.

And so on through the different tenses and moods: pugnabatur a nobis, we fought, ventum est ab illis, they came, or have come.

315. In what mood are impersonal verbs not used, and how is this mood supplied?

Impersonal verbs are not used in the imperative mood, but take the subjunctive in its stead; as, delectet, let it delight.

316. How many strictly impersonal verbs do grammarians reckon, and to what conjugation do they belong?

Grammarians reckon only ten real impersonal verbs; they all belong to the second conjugation.

Enumerate the impersonal verbs, with their meaning.

Dēcet,	decuit, etc.,	it becomes, etc.
Libet,	libuit, etc.,	it pleases, etc.
Līcet,	licuit, or licitum est, etc.,	it is allowed, lawful, etc.
Misēret,	misēruit, or miseritum est, etc.,	it pities, etc.
Oportet,	oportuit, etc.	it behooves, etc.
Pīget,	piguit, or pigitum est, etc.,	it grieves, etc.
Pōenītet,	pōenituit, etc.,	it repents, etc.
Pūdet,	puduit, or puditum est, etc.,	it shames, etc.
Tædet,	tæduit, or tæsum est, etc.,	it wearies, etc.
Līquet,	(no perfect),	it appears.

317. What particular class of words is included under impersonals?

Verbs which indicate the state of the weather, or express the operations of nature, are included under impersonals; as, pluit, it rains; ningit, it snows; fulminat, it lightens; tōnat, it thunders, etc.

ADVERBS.

318. What is an adverb?

An ADVERB is a word used to modify or limit the meaning of verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs; as, bēne dixit, he spoke well; egrēgie fidēlis, remarkably faithful; valde bēne, very well.

319. What are the principal classes into which adverbs may be divided?

Adverbs may be divided principally into adverbs of time, place, manner, quantity, and motion.

320. Mention some adverbs of time.

ADVERBS OF TIME: nunc, now; nūper, lately; ōlim, formerly; semper, always; nunquam, never; etc.

321. Mention some adverbs of place.

ADVERBS OF PLACE: hic, here; ūbi, where; illic, there; fōris, abroad; etc.

322. Mention some adverbs of manner.

ADVERBS OF MANNER: bēne, well; māle, ill; ita, sic, so; grātis, freely; etc.

323. Mention some adverbs of quantity.

ADVERBS OF QUANTITY: multum, much; pārum, little; pēne, almost; etc.

324. Mention some adverbs of motion.

ADVERBS OF MOTION: eo, thither; inde, thence; quo, whither; illuc, thither; etc.

DERIVATION OF ADVERBS.

325. How are adverbs derived?

Adverbs are derived principally from adjectives, nouns, or participles.

326. What terminations do adverbs derived from adjectives of the first and second declensions take?

Adverbs derived from adjectives of the first and second declensions in us, change us into e or ter; as, altus, alte; dūrus, dūre or durīter. Adverbs from er either change er into re or add e; as, æger, ægre; liber, libere; miser, misere. Some from us take iter and itus; as, humānus, humanīter or humanitus.

327. What generally is the termination of adverbs derived from adjectives of the third declension?

Adverbs derived from adjectives of the third declension add iter to the root; as, acris, acriter; fēlix, feliciter; turpis, turpiter.

328. In what do adverbs derived from nouns generally end?

Adverbs derived from nouns generally end in tim or itus; as, grex, a herd, gregātim, in herds; vir, a man, virītim, man by man; radix, a root, radicītus, by the roots.

329. What are the terminations of adverbs derived from participles?

Adverbs derived from participles end either in te, ter, or tim; as, doctus, docte; āmans, amanter; raptus, raptim.

330. What cases of nouns, adjectives, and participles are sometimes used as adverbs?

The ablative singular of nouns, adjectives, and participles, and the accusative singular (by the poets, plural) neuter of adjectives, are sometimes used as adverbs; as, mōdo, vulgo; cito, falso; auspicāto, consulto; solum, sublime; multa, tristia.

331. How do you explain such adverbial forms as quā, aliā, rectā, unā?

Quā, aliā, rectā, unā, and the like, are adjectives in the ablative singular feminine, with the noun viā understood; as, quā viā, by which way; aliā viā, by another way; rectā viā, straight forward; unā viā, together.

COMPARISON OF ADVERBS.

332. How are adverbs compared?

Adverbs are compared generally like the adjectives from which they are derived; the regular comparative ending in ius, and the superlative in issime or errime.

333. Compare the following adverbs.

Alte (highly),	altius,	altissime.
Fortiter (bravely),	fortius,	fortissime.
Tūto (safely),	tutius,	tutissime.
Acrīter (sharply),	acrius,	acerrime.
Libere (freely),	liberius,	liberrime.

Compare the following irregular adverbs.

Bēne (well),	melius,	optime.
Māle (badly),	pejus,	pessime.
Facile (easily),	facilius,	facillime.
Multum (much),	plus,	plurimum.
Pārum (little),	minus,	minime, or minimum.
Prope (near),	propius,	proxime.

DEFECTIVE ADVERBS.

_____	Māgis (more),	maxime.
_____	Ocius (more swiftly),	ocissime.
_____	Prius (sooner),	primo, or primum.
Merito (deservedly),	_____	meritissime.
Noviter (newly),	_____	novissime.
Nūper (lately),	_____	nuperrime.

Compare DIU and SÆPE.

Diu (long),	diutius,	diutissime.
Sæpe (often),	sæpius,	sæpissime.

PREPOSITIONS.

334. What is a preposition?

A PREPOSITION is a word which shows the relation between a noun or pronoun following it, and some other word in the sentence.

335. Why is a preposition so called, and from what is the word derived?

A preposition is so called because it is placed before the word which it governs. It is derived from præ, before, and positus, placed.

NOTE.—The poets sometimes place the prepositions after the case they govern.

336. What cases do prepositions govern?

Twenty-eight prepositions govern the accusative case, and fifteen govern the ablative.

337. Repeat (1) from ad to cis; (2) from cis to juxta; (3) from juxta to ultra, the

PREPOSITIONS WHICH GOVERN THE ACCUSATIVE CASE.

E, }
Ex, } out of, from, after, by.

Pālam, { before, with the knowledge of.

Præ, before, in comparison with.

Pro, before, for, according to.

Sine, without.

Tēnus, as far as, up to.

339. What is the difference in the use of a, ab, and abs?

A is used before consonants; ab before vowels and h, f, r, and sometimes t; abs before t and q.

340. What is the difference in the use of e and ex?

Ex is used before vowels; e or ex before consonants.

341. What prepositions govern sometimes the accusative, and sometimes the ablative?

The prepositions in, sub, super, and subter govern the accusative when motion to a place is signified; but when motion or rest in a place is signified, in and sub govern the ablative, super and subter either the accusative or ablative.

342. What is to be remarked with regard to tēnus and clam?

Tēnus is always put after its case, and sometimes governs a genitive; as, crūrum tēnus, up to the legs. Clam sometimes governs an accusative as well as an ablative; as, clam patre or patrem, unknown to his father.

343. When are prepositions used as adverbs?

Prepositions are used as adverbs when they are not followed by their case.

INSEPARABLE PREPOSITIONS.

344. What are inseparable prepositions, and why are they so called?

The syllables am, di or dis, re, se, con, are called inseparable prepositions, because they are never found except in compound words.

345. What are the significations of these prepositions?

AM signifies round, or about; as, ambio, to surround.

DI or DIS, asunder, or apart; as, divello, to pull asunder.

RE, back, or again; as, relëgo, to read again.

SE, apart, or aside; as, sepōno, to lay aside.

CON, together; as, concreasco, to grow together.

346. Which two sometimes reverse the meaning of a word?

Di or dis, and re, sometimes reverse the meaning of a word; as, facilis, easy; difficilis, difficult; claudio, I shut; reclūdo, I open.

CONJUNCTIONS.

347. What is a conjunction?

A CONJUNCTION is a word used to connect words or sentences.

348. What are some of the principal classes into which conjunctions may be divided?

Conjunctions, according to their different significations, may be divided into the following principal classes, namely:

1. COPULATIVES; as, ac, atque, et, que, etiam, quōque.
2. DISJUNCTIVES; as, aut, vel, seu, sive, ve, nēve, neu.
3. CONCESSIVES; as, etsi, etiamsi, licet, quanquam.
4. ADVERSATIVES; as, at, atqui, autem, sed, vērūm.
5. CAUSALS; as, enim, etēnim, nam, quando, quia.
6. ILLATIVES; as, ergo, idcirco, igitur, quāre.
7. FINALS; as, ne, quā, quo, quomīnus, ut, ūtī.
8. CONDITIONALS; as, si, sin, nīsī, dummōdo.
9. SUSPENSIVES; as, an, anne, annon, ne, necne, num, utrum.

349. What is the difference between a copulative and a disjunctive conjunction?

A copulative conjunction connects things that may be considered jointly; a disjunctive, such as are to be considered separately.

350. What is the relation of concessives and adversatives to each other?

Concessive and adversative conjunctions are opposed to each other; the former concede or grant something as true; the latter oppose or object to it as such.

351. What does an illative conjunction express?

An illative conjunction expresses an inference that something is true, or ought to be done or said.

352. What do final conjunctions denote?

Final conjunctions denote the end, purpose, or object for which something is done or said.

353. What conjunctions are called enclitics, and why?

The conjunctions que, ve (and the interrogative particle ne), which are always annexed to a word, are called enclitics, because when placed after a long syllable they incline the accent to that syllable; as, vi'rum, virum'que; am'bo, ambo've; pu'tas, putas'ne?

INTERJECTIONS.

254. What is an interjection?

An INTERJECTION is a word used in exclamations, to express some emotion of the mind; as, oh! hei! heu! oh! ha! alas!

355. What parts of speech are sometimes used as interjections?

Nouns and adjectives in the neuter gender are sometimes used as interjections; as, pax! peace! be still! mālum! the mischief! infandum! shame!

SYNTAX.

356. What is syntax?

SYNTAX is that part of grammar which treats of the proper arrangement of words in a sentence.

SENTENCES.

357. What is a sentence, and what is it sometimes called?

A SENTENCE is such an assemblage of words as makes complete sense; as, homo est mortalis, man is mortal. A sentence is sometimes called a proposition.

358. How many kinds of sentences are there?

Sentences are either simple, compound, or complex.

359. What is a simple sentence?

A SIMPLE SENTENCE is one which contains only a single proposition; as, vita est brevis, life is short.

360. What is a compound sentence?

A COMPOUND SENTENCE is one which contains two or more independent propositions; as, vita est brevis, et ars est longa, life is short, and art is long.

361. What is a complex sentence?

A COMPLEX SENTENCE is one in which one (or more) of the propositions is dependent on another, which is called the leading sentence; as, memoria minuitur, nisi eam exerceas, the memory is weakened, if you do not exercise it.

362. Explain what you mean by an independent and what by a dependent proposition.

An independent proposition makes sense by itself; as, Phocion fuit perpetuo pauper, Phocion was perpetually poor.

A dependent proposition makes sense only in connection with the one on which it is dependent; as, Phocion fuit perpetuo pauper, cum ditissimus esse posset, Phocion was perpetually poor, whereas he might have been very rich. Here cum ditissimus esse posset depends for its meaning on the preceding clause, as without it we could not tell who might have been very rich.

363. What are the principal parts of a sentence?

The principal parts of a sentence are the subject and the predicate.

364. What is the subject, and what the predicate?

The subject of a sentence is that of which something is affirmed, and the predicate is that which is affirmed of the subject; as, puer lūdit, the boy plays. Here puer is the subject, and lūdit the predicate.

365. What is a grammatical subject, and what a logical?

A grammatical subject is a single word, either a noun, or a pronoun, or an infinitive. A logical subject is the grammatical subject with the words which modify its meaning; as, conscientia bēne actæ vitæ est jucundissīma, the consciousness of a well-spent life is very delightful. Here conscientia is the grammatical subject, and conscientia bēne actæ vitæ the logical.

366. What is a grammatical predicate, and what a logical?

A grammatical predicate is a single verb; a logical predicate is the verb together with the words which modify its meaning; as, Viriāthus bellum contra Romānos excitāvit, Viriathus excited a war against the Romans. Here excitāvit is the grammatical predicate, and excitāvit bellum contra Romānos the logical.

367. What is a compound subject?

A COMPOUND SUBJECT consists of two or more simple subjects belonging to the same predicate or verb; as, lūna et stellæ fulgēbant, the moon and stars were shining. Here lūna et stellæ is the compound subject.

368. What is a compound predicate?

A COMPOUND PREDICATE consists of two or more verbs having a single subject; as, virtus laudātur et alget, virtue is praised and starves. Here laudātur et alget is the compound predicate.

369. What further may be said of all subjects and predicates?

All subjects and predicates may be modified by other words, which are used to explain, enlarge, restrict, or otherwise qualify their meaning.

GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF SYNTAX.

370. State briefly the general principles of syntax.

1. Every sentence must have a subject (nominative) and a predicate (verb), expressed or understood.

2. Every nominative must have its own verb, and every finite verb its own nominative, expressed or understood.

3. Every oblique case must be governed by some word in the sentence, expressed or understood.

4. Every infinitive (1) must be governed by some verb; (2) have an accusative subject before it; (3) or be used as a noun, either by itself or with other words, as the subject or object of a verb.

5. Every adjective, adjective pronoun, or participle must have some noun, expressed or understood, with which it agrees in gender, number, and case.

6. Every relative must have some noun, pronoun, or other word, expressed or understood, to which it refers.

GOVERNMENT OF THE OBLIQUE CASES.

371. How is the genitive case governed?

Every genitive must be governed by some noun, adjective, verb, or adverb, or be used to express the place where or in which, and sometimes price.

372. How is the dative case governed?

Every dative must be governed by some noun, adjective, verb, adverb, or interjection.

373. How is the accusative case governed?

Every accusative must be governed by some verb or preposition, or be put before an infinitive as its subject, or be used to express the place whither or to which, time how long, measure, or distance.

374. How is the vocative case governed?

Every vocative is governed by the interjections O, heu, or proh, or is used without an interjection to denote the person or thing addressed.

375. How is the ablative case governed?

Every ablative case is governed by a noun, adjective; verb, or preposition; is used after the comparative degree; as the case absolute; to express time when or how long; the place by or through which; price and measure.

CONCORD AND GOVERNMENT.

376. Into how many parts is syntax divided?

The parts of syntax are commonly reckoned two: concord or agreement and government.

377. What is concord?

CONCORD is the agreement of one word with another in gender, number, case, or person.

378. What is government?

GOVERNMENT is the power which one word has over another in determining its mood, tense, or case.

379. How many concords are there?

There are four concords or agreements; namely,

1. Of a substantive with a substantive.
2. Of an adjective with a substantive.
3. Of a relative with its antecedent.
4. Of a verb with its nominative or subject.

CONCORD.

A SUBSTANTIVE WITH A SUBSTANTIVE.

380. What is the rule for the agreement of one substantive with another?

Substantives denoting the same person or thing are put in the same case; as,

Cicëro orātor,	Cicero the orator;
Urbs Athenæ,	the city Athens;
Nos consules,	we consuls;
Filius deliciæ matris,	a son the darling of his mother.

381. What is this agreement called, and what is its use?

The agreement of one noun with another in case is called apposition, and the second noun is used to explain or describe the first.

382. Does this rule require that the apposition nouns should agree in gender and number, as well as in case?

The rule for apposition only requires that the nouns should agree in case. In the example urbs Athenæ, Athenæ is plural, while urbs is singular; and in filius deliciæ, deliciæ is plural and feminine, while filius is singular and masculine.

383. When two or more nouns in the singular have another noun in apposition with them, in what number is the latter put?

When two or more nouns have another noun in apposition with them, the latter is put in the plural; as,

Cicëro et Antonius consules,	Cicero and Anthony, the consuls;
Rōma et Carthāgo urbes,	the cities Rome and Carthage.

384. When the singular nouns are of different genders, what must be the gender of the apposition noun?

When the singular nouns are of different genders, the apposition noun is put in the masculine rather than the feminine, if both forms exist; as, Ptolemæus et Cleopatra, reges (not reginas), Ptolemy and Cleopatra, the king and queen (lit. rulers).

AGREEMENT OF AN ADJECTIVE WITH A SUBSTANTIVE.

385. What is the rule for the agreement of an adjective with a substantive?

An adjective agrees with its substantive in gender, number, and case; as,

Bonus vir, a good man; Boni viri, good men.
Casta femina, a chaste woman; Castæ feminae, chaste women.
Dulce pōmum, a sweet apple; Dulcia pōma, sweet apples.

386. To what other classes of words does this rule apply?

Adjective pronouns and participles, like adjectives, agree with their nouns in gender, number, and case.

387. When two or more nouns singular have an adjective belonging to them, in what number is the adjective put?

When two or more nouns have an adjective belonging to them, the adjective is put in the plural number; as, Vir et puer territi lupo, a man and a boy frightened by a wolf.

388. What is the rule when the nouns are of different genders?

When the nouns are of different genders, the adjective is put in the masculine in preference to the feminine, and in the feminine in preference to the neuter; as, Pater et mater sunt mortui, my father and mother are dead.

389. How if the nouns denote things without life?

If the nouns denote things without life, the adjective is generally put in the neuter plural; as, Labor et voluptas sunt dissimilia naturā, labor and pleasure are unlike in nature.

390. When an infinitive mood or part of a sentence is used as a noun, in what gender is the adjective put?

When an infinitive mood or part of a sentence is used as a noun, the adjective is put in the neuter gender; as,

Mentiri est turpe, to lie is base;
Solem videre jucundum est, to see the sun is pleasant.

A relative is governed, just like a noun of the same case, by some word in its own member of the sentence; as,

Deus quem colimus, God whom we worship; (445)

Cujus munere vivimus, by whose gift we live; (404)

Cui nullus est similis, to whom there is none like; (426)

A quo omnia reguntur, by whom all things are governed; (338.)

AGREEMENT OF THE VERB AND ITS NOMINATIVE.

396. What is the general rule for the agreement of a verb with its nominative?

A verb agrees with its nominative in number and person; as,

Ego lěgo, I read;

Nos legimus, we read.

Tu scrībis, thou writest;

Vos scribitis, you write.

Preceptor dōcet, {the master teaches; } Preceptōres dōcent, {the masters teach. }

397. When two or more nouns singular form the nominative, in what number is the verb put?

When two or more nouns singular form the nominative to a verb, if they are taken together, the verb is put in the plural; but if separately, the verb is in the singular; as,

Cato et Socrates sapientes erant, Cato and Socrates were wise;

Si Socrātes aut Plāto dicēret, if Socrates or Plato should say.

398. What is the rule for a verb in the case of a noun of multitude?

If a collective noun expresses many as one whole, the verb is in the singular; if as individuals, the verb is in the plural; as,

Popŭlus (whole) me sibīlat, the people hiss me;

Pars (individuals) epulis onerant mensas, { part load the tables with food.

399. When a noun in the nominative singular is connected with another in the ablative by cum, in what number is the verb put?

When a noun in the nominative singular is connected with another in the ablative by cum, the verb may be put in the plural; as, Rēmo cum frātre Quirīnus jūra dābunt, Romulus with his brother Remus shall give laws.

400. What classes of verbs have a nominative both before and after them?

The substantive verb sum, neuter verbs of motion, and passive verbs of naming, electing, and esteeming or reckoning, have the same case after as before them; as,

Ego sum discipūlus,	I am a pupil;
Tu vocāris Joannes,	you are named John;
Illa incēdit regina,	she walks as a queen;
Numa creātus est rex,	Numa was elected king;
Scio te esse discipūlum,	I know that you are a pupil.

401. What is the nominative after these verbs called?

The nominative after these verbs is called the predicate nominative, and may be either a noun, an adjective, or a participle.

402. What verbs have no nominative?

Impersonal verbs have no nominative.

403. Are the personal pronouns, as nominatives, generally expressed.

The personal pronouns ego, tu, nos, vos, as nominatives, are seldom expressed unless they are emphatic, as the termination of the verb marks the person with sufficient distinctness.

GOVERNMENT OF THE GENITIVE CASE.

THE GENITIVE GOVERNED BY A NOUN.

404. Repeat the rule for the government of a genitive by a noun.

One substantive governs another in the genitive, when the latter limits the signification of the former; as,

Amor gloriæ,	the love (of what?) of glory;
Lex natūræ,	the law (of what?) of nature.

405. In what two senses is the governed genitive used?

The governed genitive is used either in a subjective (active) or an objective (passive) sense.

406. Explain the meaning of this subjective or objective use.

The genitive is subjective when the action or feeling of the noun which it limits belongs to itself, and objective when it is the object of such action or feeling. Thus in amor Dei the genitive is both subjective and objective, as amor Dei may mean either God's love toward us, or our love toward him. But in providentia Dei the genitive can be subjective only, and in t̃mor Dei the genitive can be objective only, as in the former providentia can only be predicated of God, and in the latter t̃mor can only be predicated of us.

407. When the limiting noun has an adjective joined with it, in what one of two cases may it be put?

When the limiting or governed noun has an adjective of praise, blame, or quality joined with it, it may be put either in the genitive or ablative; the ablative is most common; as,

Vir summæ prudentiæ, or summá prudentiá, { a man of the highest wisdom;
Puer pr̃obæ ind̃olis, or pr̃obá ind̃ole, a boy of good disposition.

408. What is this genitive or ablative called?

This genitive or ablative, with its adjective, is called the genitive or ablative of character or description.

GENITIVE GOVERNED BY AN ADJECTIVE USED AS A SUBSTANTIVE.

409. What case does an adjective without a substantive govern?

An adjective in the neuter gender without a substantive (i. e., used substantively) governs the genitive; as,

Multum pecuniæ, much money;
Quid rei est? what is the matter?

410. Does this rule apply to adjectives in the plural as well as in the singular?

Adjectives in the neuter plural, as in the singular, without a substantive, govern the genitive; mostly, however, in the plural, and with a partitive signification; as,

Opāca locōrum, dark places; Amāra curārum, bitter cares.

THE GENITIVE GOVERNED BY ADJECTIVES.

411. What adjectives govern the genitive?

Verbal adjectives, or such as imply an operation of the mind, govern the genitive; as,

Avīdus gloriæ,	desirous of glory;
Ignārus fraudis,	ignorant of fraud;
Mēmor beneficiōrum,	mindful of favors.

412. What is a verbal adjective?

A verbal adjective is one derived from a verb; as, avīdus from aveo, I desire; ignārus from ignōro, I am ignorant of; mēmor from memīni, I remember.

413. Under this rule what verbals are included?

Under this rule are included verbals in AX, NS, and TUS. Also, adjectives signifying (1) desire, disgust; (2) knowledge, ignorance; (3) memory, forgetfulness; (4) care, negligence; (5) fear, confidence; (6) guilt and innocence.

414. What is the rule for partitives, comparatives, superlatives, etc.?

Partitives and words placed partitively, comparatives, superlatives, interrogatives, and some numerals govern the genitive plural; as,

Aliquis philosophōrum,	some one of the philosophers;
Senior fratrum,	the elder of the brothers;
Doctissimus Romanōrum,	the most learned of the Romans;
Quis nostrūm,	which of us;
Una musārum,	one of the muses;
Octāvus sapientum,	the eighth of the wise men.

415. What do you mean by a partitive, or a word placed partitively?

An adjective is partitive, or a word is used partitively, when either signifies a part and not the whole of any number of persons or things.

416. Do partitives ever govern a genitive singular?

Partitive superlatives govern a collective noun in the genitive singular, and take the gender of the individuals of which the partitive noun is composed; as,

Vir fortissimus nostræ civitatis, the bravest man of our state;
Maximus stirpis, the greatest of his race;
Ultimos orbis Britannos, { the Britons, the most distant
 { people of the world.

417. What is the rule for adjectives of plenty and want?

Adjectives of plenty or want govern the genitive or ablative; as,

Plēnus iræ or irâ, full of anger;
Inops ratiōnis or ratiōne, void of reason.

418. Mention some adjectives which govern the genitive only.

The following are some of the adjectives which govern the genitive only: benignus, exsors, impos, irritus, liberâlis, munificus, etc.

419. Mention some which govern the ablative only.

The following adjectives govern the ablative only: beātus, mutilus, tumidus, turgidus.

THE GENITIVE GOVERNED BY VERBS.

420. With what significations does sum govern the genitive?

Sum, when it signifies property, characteristic, or duty, governs the genitive of the person to whom the property, character, or duty pertains; as,

Hæc dñmus est Cæsâris, this house belongs to Cæsar;
Hominis est errâre, it is characteristic of man to err;
Militum est suo dñci parâre, { it is the duty of soldiers to { obey their general.

421. What should be remembered in connection with this rule?

It will be useful to remember that whenever a genitive precedes (as it usually does) or follows any part of the verb sum, it is to be translated by one or other of the meanings in the examples.

422. What is the rule for misereor, miseresco, and satāgo?

Misereor, miseresco, and satāgo govern the genitive; as,

Miserēre civium tuōrum, pity your countrymen;

Satāgit rērum suārum, he is busy with his own affairs.

423. Mention some other verbs which, by a peculiar construction, govern the genitive.

1. Verbs denoting an affection of the mind are sometimes followed by a genitive; as,

Angor (or) discrucior animi, I am distressed in mind;

Lætor malōrum, I rejoice at their misfortunes.

2. A few verbs, especially among the poets, and by a Greek construction, govern the genitive; as,

Abstinēto irārum, cease from your anger;

Desine querelārum, cease from your complaints;

Regnāvit populōrum, he governed the nations.

424. What is the rule for recordor, memini, etc.?

Recordor, memini, reminiscor, and obliviscor, govern the genitive or accusative; as,

Recordor lectiōnis or lectiōnem, I remember the lesson;

Obliviscor injuriæ or injuriam, I forget an injury.

GOVERNMENT OF THE DATIVE CASE.

THE DATIVE GOVERNED BY NOUNS.

425. Do substantives ever govern the dative?

A substantive frequently governs the dative when this dative is strongly its object; as,

Hostis virtutibus, an enemy to virtue;

Exitium pecōri, a destruction to the flock;

Obedientia legibus, obedience to the laws.

A dative is also sometimes used for a genitive; as,

Vēnit ei (for ejus) in mentem, it came into his mind;

Cui (for cujus) corpus porrigitur, whose body extends.

THE DATIVE GOVERNED BY ADJECTIVES.

426. What adjectives govern the dative?

Adjectives signifying profit or disprofit, ease or difficulty, likeness or unlikeness, govern the dative; as,

Utilis bello, useful for war;
Terra facilis pecōri, a land well adapted for cattle;
Similis patri, like his father.

427. What other adjectives govern the dative?

Several adjectives compounded with con, and verbals in bilis and dus, govern the dative; as,

Consciūs sibi recti, conscious to himself of right; (gov. also gen.)
Flebilis nulli, wept for by none;
Amandus or amabilis omnibus, worthy to be loved by all.

428. Which of these govern sometimes the genitive and sometimes the dative?

Affinis, similis, commūnis, par, proprius, finitimus, and some others, govern sometimes the genitive and sometimes the dative.

429. What case does īdem, the same, govern?

Idem, the same, in imitation of the Greek, governs the dative; as,

Jupīter īdem (est) omnibus, Jupiter is the same to all.

THE DATIVE GOVERNED BY VERBS.

430. What universal rule is there for the government of the dative by verbs?

Any verb may govern the dative of the object or end for which any thing is or is done; as,

Finis vēnit imperio, an end has come to the empire;
Anīmus rēdit hostibus, courage returns to the enemy;
Tibi sēris, tibi mētis, { you sow for yourself, you reap for yourself.

SPECIAL RULES.

431. What is the rule for sum and its compounds?

Sum and its compounds, except possum, govern the dative; as,

Præfuit exercitui, he commanded the army;
Debemus omnibus prodesse, we ought to do good to all.

432. What is the rule for the possessor and the thing possessed?

Est is followed by a dative denoting the possessor, and the thing possessed is put in the nominative; as,

Est mihi liber, a book is to me, or I have a book;
Sunt mihi libri, books are to me, or I have books;
Sunt regibus longæ mænus, kings have long hands.

433. What is the rule for verbs compounded with sātis, bēne, māle?

Verbs compounded with sātis, bēne, and māle govern the dative; as,

Benefacere reipublicæ, to benefit the state;
Legibus satisfecit, he satisfied the laws;
Maledicit utrique, he abuses both.

434. What is the rule for verbs compounded with certain prepositions?

Many verbs compounded with these ten prepositions, ad, ante, con, in, inter, ob, post, præ, sub, and super, govern the dative; as,

Pecōri signum impressit, he put a mark upon the cattle;
Annuæ cœptis, favor our undertakings;
Hibernis Labiēnum præposuit, { he placed Labienus over the winter quarters.

435. Verbs with what particular significations govern the dative?

Verbs govern the dative which signify to profit or hurt; to favor or assist, and the contrary; to command and obey; to serve and resist; to threaten and be angry; to trust and persuade; as,

Fortūna fāvet fortibus, fortune favors the brave;
Paruit legibus, he obeyed the laws;
Militibus persuasit, he persuaded his soldiers.

436. What four verbs are exceptions to this rule?

Jubeo, jūro, lædo, and offendo govern the accusative.

437. Mention some which vary their construction with a difference of signification, according as they govern a dative or accusative.

The following verbs govern a dative or accusative, with a difference of signification; namely,

Consulo tibi, I consult your interest ; te, I ask your advice.

Æmulor tibi, I rival you; te, I imitate you.

Timeo tibi, I fear for your safety; te, I fear you.

Studeo tibi, I favor you. $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{alicui}, \text{ I apply myself to something;} \\ \textit{aliquid}, \text{ I desire something.} \end{array} \right.$

438. Is motion to a place ever expressed by the dative?

Motion to or toward a place is expressed by ad with the accusative. Poets sometimes express it by the dative.

IMPERSONAL VERBS.

439. What case do impersonal verbs govern?

Impersonal verbs govern the dative; as,

Expēdit reipublicæ, it is profitable for the state;

Nōbis non licet peccāre, it is not allowed us to sin.

440. What impersonal verbs form the first exception to this rule?

Rēfert and intērest govern the genitive ; as,

-Refert patris, it concerns my father;

Intērest omnium, it is the interest of all.

441. Is this construction followed with the personal pronouns?

Instead of the personal pronouns in the genitive, rēfert and intērest take the possessives, mea, tua, sua, nostra, and vestra, in the ablative ; as,

Non meâ refert, it does not concern me ;

Tuâ maxime înterest, it greatly concerns you.

442. What verbs form the second exception?

These five, misēret, pœnitēt, pūdet, tædet, and pīget, govern the accusative of the person exercising the feeling, with the genitive of the object on which the feeling is exercised; as,

Misēret me (person) tui (object), I pity you;
Pœnitēt me (person) peccāti (object), I repent of my sins;
Tædet me (person) vitæ (object), I am weary of my life;
Pūdet me (person) culpæ (object), I am ashamed of my fault.

443. What verbs form the third exception?

These four, Dēcet, delectat, jūvat, opōrtet, govern the accusative of the person with the infinitive; as,

Non dēcet te rixāri, it does not become you to scold;
Delectat me studēre, I delight to study;
Nihil in bello opōrtet contemnī, nothing in war ought to be despised.

VERBS WHICH GOVERN TWO DATIVES.

444. What verbs govern two datives?

The verbs sum, do, dūco, verto, tribuo, habeo, and some others, govern two datives, one of the person to whom, and the other of the object or end for which; as,

Est mihi voluptāti, it is (or it brings) a pleasure to me;
Hoc mīsīt mihi munēri, he sent this to me as a present;
Ducitur honōri tibi, it is reckoned an honor to you.

ACCUSATIVE GOVERNED BY VERBS.

445. What verbs govern the accusative case?

A transitive verb governs its object in the accusative case; as,
Ama Deum, love God; Reverēre parentes, reverence your parents.

446. Do intransitive verbs ever govern an accusative case?

Some intransitive verbs govern an accusative case of kindred signification to their own; as,

Pugnāre pugnam, to fight a battle;
Canēre cantum, to sing a song;
Currēre cursum, to run a race.

GOVERNMENT OF THE VOCATIVE CASE.

447. How is the vocative governed?

The vocative is used to express the name of a person or thing addressed, or is governed by the interjections O, heu, proh, etc.; as,

Catilinā! Catiline, or O Catiline!
O formōse puer! O handsome boy!
Heu me misērum! ah, wretch that I am!

448. What do the interjections en and ecce govern?

En and ecce govern the nominative or accusative; as,

En ego vester Ascānius! lo, I, your Ascanius!
Ecce duas āras! behold two altars!
Ecce hōmo, or homīnem! behold the man!

449. Does the vocative form any part of a proposition?

The vocative forms no part of a proposition; it serves only to show to whom the proposition is addressed.

GOVERNMENT OF THE ABLATIVE CASE.

THE ABLATIVE GOVERNED BY NOUNS.

450. What nouns govern the ablative?

Opus and usus, signifying need, govern the ablative; as,

Est opus pecuniā, there is need of money;
Nunc ūsus viribus, now there is need of strength.

451. Do opus and usus ever govern any other case?

Opus and usus sometimes, but rarely, govern the genitive case; as, Argenti ōpus fuit, there was need of money.

452. When opus is used as an adjective, what is the construction?

When opus is used as an indeclinable adjective it has no government, but agrees with its noun, like any other adjective; as, Dux nobis ōpus est, we need a leader or guide.

453. With what particular class of words are opus and usus often joined?

Opus and usus are often joined with the perfect participle, used substantively; as,

Opus maturāto,—consulto, there is need of haste,—consultation;
Usus facto, there is need of action.

ABLATIVE GOVERNED BY ADJECTIVES.

454. What adjectives govern the ablative?

These adjectives, dignus, indignus, contentus, præditus, captus, and frētus; also the participles nātus, sātus, ortus, and the like, denoting origin, govern the ablative; as,

Dignus honōre ,	worthy of honor;
Contentus parvo ,	content with little;
Præditus virtūte ,	endued with virtue;
Captus oculis ,	injured in his eyes (blind);
Frētus viribus ,	trusting to his strength;
Ortus regibus ,	descended from kings.

455. Do any of these adjectives ever govern any other case?

Dignus and indignus sometimes govern the genitive; as,

Dignus memoriæ ,	worthy of memory;
Indignus avōrum ,	unworthy of his ancestors.

ABLATIVE WITH THE COMPARATIVE DEGREE.

456. When two objects are compared by means of the comparative degree, what are the two constructions?

The comparative degree governs the ablative when the conjunction quam (than) is omitted; as,

Dulcior melle ,	sweeter than honey;
Præstantior auro ,	more precious than gold;
Nihil est virtūte formosius , nothing is more beautiful than virtue.

But when quam is used, the second noun is in the same case as the first, being simply connected with it by quam as a conjunction; as,

Aurum gravius est quam argentum, gold is heavier than silver;

Lupi ferociōres sunt quam cānes, { wolves are more ferocious than dogs.

ABLATIVE ABSOLUTE.

457. What is the case absolute in Latin?

A substantive with a participle whose case depends on no other word is put in the ablative absolute; as,

Sōle oriente, fugiunt tenēbræ, { the sun rising, or when the sun rises, darkness flies away;

Opĕre peracto, ludĕmus, { our work being finished, or when our work is finished, we will play.

458. State the idiomatic ablative absolute with the participle omitted.

The verb sum having no present participle by which to translate the word “being,” two nouns, or a noun and pronoun or adjective, are put in the ablative absolute with the participle omitted; as,

Natūrā dūce, { nature being guide, or under the guidance of nature;

Me suasōre, I being adviser, or by my advice;

Invitā Minervā, { Minerva being unwilling, or in spite of Minerva.

459. In what particular case is this construction universal?

The omission of the participle is universal when the time and name of office are indicated; as,

Manlio consŭle, in the consulship of Manlius;

Marco Messāla et Marco Pisōne consulibus, { in the consulship of Marcus Messala and Marcus Piso.

460. For what is the ablative absolute principally used?

The ablative absolute is principally used to mark the time or circumstances of an event or action. (See examples already given.)

ABLATIVE OF PRICE.

461. In what case is the price of a thing expressed?

The price of a thing is put in the ablative; as,

Constitit talento, it cost a talent;

Vendidit hic auro patriam, this man sold his country for gold.

462. What adjectives form an exception to this rule?

The adjectives tanti, quantī, plūris, and minōris are put in the genitive; as,

Quantī constitit, how much cost it?

Non vendo plūris quam cætēri, { I do not sell for more than others.

MEASURE OR DISTANCE.

463. How is measure or distance expressed?

Measure or distance is put in the accusative, and sometimes in the ablative; as,

Mūrus dēcem pēdes altus, a wall ten feet high;

Urbs distat triginta millia, or } the city is distant thirty miles;
triginta millibus passuum, }

Iter, or itinēre, uniūs diēi, one day's journey.

464. How is excess or deficiency in measure expressed?

Excess or deficiency in measure is expressed in the ablative; as,

Sesquipēde longior, taller by a foot and a half;

Nōvem pedibus mīnor, less by nine feet;

Quo difficilīus, eo præclarīus, { the more difficult, the more glorious;

Quanto doctior, tanto submissior, { the more learned, the more humble.

465. In comparisons of this sort, how are the correlatives eo and quo, tanto and quanto, to be translated?

In comparisons of this sort, the correlatives eo and quo, tanto and quanto, should be translated by "the" emphatic, as in the last two examples.

ABLATIVE OF CAUSE, MANNER, MEANS, &c.

466. What case is used to express cause, manner, means, etc.?

The cause, manner, means, and instrument of an action are put in the ablative without a preposition; as,

Palleo mētū, I am pale for fear (cause);
Fecit suo mōre, he did it after his own way (manner);
Auro ostrōque decōri, adorned with gold and purple (means);
Cæsus est virgis, he was beaten with rods (instrument).

467. Is this rule universal?

Cause, manner, and means are sometimes expressed in the accusative and sometimes in the ablative, governed by prepositions; as,

Ob adulterium cæsi, slain on account of adultery;
Defessus de via, tired with the way.

468. When the agent is voluntary, or a person, what is the construction?

When the agent is voluntary, or a person, a preposition must be used; ob, propter, or per with the accusative, and a or ab with the ablative; as,

Per te liberātus sum, I have been liberated through you;
Propter vos decipi, to be deceived on your account;
Clodius a Milōne interfectus est, Clodius was killed by Milo.

LIMITING EXPRESSIONS,—ABLATIVE—ACCUSATIVE.

469. By what case are general statements restricted to some particular qualification or part?

General statements are limited to some particular qualification or part by the ablative, which is called the "ablative of limitation;" as,

Pietāte filius, a son (in what respect?) in affection;
Pedibus æger, diseased (in what part?) in his feet.

475. What particular verbs govern the ablative?

Utor, abūtor, fruor, fungor, potior, and vescor govern the ablative; as,

Utitur fraude, he uses deceit;
Abutitur libris, he abuses books.

476. What other verbs besides these govern the ablative?

Gaudeo, creor, nascor, fīdo, vīvo, pasco, epūlor, nītor, and some others govern the ablative; as,

Elephantes amnibus gaudent, elephants delight in rivers;
Silice non nāti sumus, we are not born of a stone;
Animum pictūra pascit ināni, { he feeds his mind on the empty picture.

477. What case does potior often govern?

Potior often governs the genitive; as,

Potiri urbis, to get possession of the city;
Potiri rerum, to possess the chief command.

But potior, fungor, and vescor also sometimes govern the accusative; as,

Potiri urbem; Officia fungi, to discharge duties;
Sacras lauros vescor, I will feed on sacred laurels.

VERBS WHICH GOVERN TWO CASES.

ACCUSATIVE AND GENITIVE.

478. What verbs govern the accusative and genitive?

Verbs of accusing, condemning, acquitting, and admonishing, with the accusative of a person, govern the genitive of the crime, punishment, or subject of admonition; as,

Arguit me furti, he accuses me of theft;
Meipsum inertiae condemno, I condemn myself of laziness;
Illum homicidii absolvunt, they acquit him of manslaughter;
Monet me officii, he admonishes me of my duty.

479. Do any of these verbs vary their construction?

Instead of the genitive of crime, punishment, etc., some of these verbs take an accusative or ablative, with or without a preposition; as,

Accusāre de negligentia,	to accuse of negligence;
Me peccāto solvo,	I acquit myself of fault;
Damnatus ad pœnam,	condemned to punishment;
Eos hoc moneo,	I warn them of this.

480. What cases do verbs of valuing govern?

Verbs of valuing, together with the case which they usually govern, govern a genitive denoting the degree of estimation, such as magni, parvi, nihili; as,

Æstimo te magni,	I value you much;
Mihi stetit plūris,	it cost me more;
Est parvi,—tanti,	it is of little value,—it is worth while.

481. Under this rule what particular genitives are to be reckoned?

Under this rule the genitives assis, floci, pili, hujus, and some others are to be reckoned; as,

Floci te non facio,	I do not care a straw for you;
Non te hujus facio,	{ I do not care that (a snap of my fingers) for you;
Æqui bonique facio,	I take this in good part.

ACCUSATIVE AND DATIVE.

482. What verbs govern the accusative and dative?

Verbs of comparing, giving, declaring, and taking away govern the accusative of the person or thing compared, etc., and the dative of the person or thing to which it is compared, etc.; as,

Compāro Virgilium Homēro,	I compare Virgil to Homer;
Suum cuique tribuito,	give every man his own;
Narras fabulā surdo,	you tell a story to a deaf man;
Eripuit me morti,	he rescued me from death.

483. In relation to the verbs which govern the accusative and dative, what are these cases called?

The accusative, or thing done or said, is called the direct object, and the person to whom it is done or said is called the remote or indirect object.

TWO ACCUSATIVES.

484. What verbs govern two accusatives?

Verbs of asking and teaching, and cēlo (to conceal), govern two accusatives, the one of a person and the other of a thing, etc.; as,

Rōgo te nummos,	I ask you for money;
Posce deos veniam,	ask favor of the gods;
Docuit me grammaticam,	he taught me grammar;
Antigōnus iter omnes cēlat,	{ Antigonus conceals his route from all.

485. Is this construction always followed?

Verbs of asking sometimes take the ablative with ab or ex, and verbs of teaching the ablative with de; as,

Veniam ab ipso orēmus,	let us beg favor of him;
Istud volēbam ex te percontāri,	{ I wished to inquire of you about that;
De itinēre hostium senātum edōcet,	{ he informs the senate about the march of the enemy.

ACCUSATIVE AND ABLATIVE.

486. What verbs govern the accusative and ablative?

Verbs of binding, loading, filling, clothing, depriving, and their contraries, govern the accusative and ablative; as,

Onērat nāves auro,	he loads the ships with gold;
Patēram mēro implet,	she fills the goblet with wine;
Terra se gramīne vestit,	{ the earth clothes itself with grass;
Impedimentis exuit hostem,	{ he stripped the enemy of their baggage.

487. Instead of the ablative, what case do verbs of filling sometimes take?

Verbs of filling (in imitation of the Greek) sometimes take a genitive; as,

Adolescentem suæ temeritatis implet, { he fills the youth with his own rashness.

PASSIVE VERBS.

488. What is the construction of verbs in the passive which govern two cases in the active?

Verbs which govern two cases in the active voice retain the latter in the passive; as,

Accūsor furti, I am accused of theft; (478)

Virgilius comparātur Homēro, { Virgil is compared to Homer; (482)

Doceor grammaticam, I am taught grammar; (484)

Nāvis onerātur auro, the ship is loaded with gold. (486.)

489. In changing the construction from the active to the passive, which case becomes the subject of the sentence?

In changing the construction from the active to the passive, the direct object or accusative always becomes the subject or nominative, while the indirect remains unchanged, as in the examples just given.

490. With passive verbs, in what case is the agent or doer put?

Passive verbs, especially with the poets, take the agent or doer in the dative, instead of in the ablative with a or ab; as,

Vix audior ulli, { I am scarcely heard by any one;

Scribēris Vario, { you shall be described by Varius;

Nulla audīta mīhi sorōrum, { none of your sisters have been heard of by me.

PLACE,—NAMES OF TOWNS.

491. In what case is the name of a town put to express place where or in which?

The name of a town denoting the place where or in which is put in the genitive; as,

Vixit Rōmæ, he lived at Rome;
Mortuus est Milēti, he died at Miletus.

492. What is the exception to this rule?

If the name of the town where or in which is of the third declension or plural number, it is expressed in the ablative; as,

Habītat Carthagīne, he dwells at Carthage;
Studit Athēnis, he studied at Athens.

493. How is near or at a town expressed?

At or near a town is expressed by ad or apud with the accusative; as,

Ad or apud Trojam, at or near Troy;
Ad or apud Pharsālum, at or near Pharsalia.

494. When the place whither or to which is denoted, in what case is the name of the town put?

The name of a town denoting the place whither or to which is put in the accusative; as,

Vēnit Rōmam, he came to Rome;
Profectus est Athēnas, he went to Athens.

495. In what case does the name of a town denote the place whence or from which, by or through which?

The name of a town whence or from which, by or through which, is put in the ablative; as,

Discessit Corintho, he departed from Corinth;
Laodiceā iter faciēbat, he went through Laodicea.

496. What general remark is to be made in regard to the foregoing rules ?

The names of towns expressing place in all of the foregoing cases are sometimes put after prepositions ; as,

Where or in which : In Roma, in Philippis, in Rome, at Philippi.

Whither or to which : In Eph̄esum abiī, I went to Ephesus.

By or through : Per Thebas īter faciēbat, he went through Thebes.

497. How are names of countries, provinces, etc., construed ?

The names of countries, provinces, and other places, except large islands, are generally construed with prepositions ; sometimes without ; as,

Nātus in Italia, born in Italy ;

Abiit in Latium, he is gone to Latium ;

Vēnit Sardiniam, he came to Sardinia ;

Rediit ex Italia, he has returned from Italy.

DOMUS AND RUS.

498. What is the construction of dōmus and rus ?

Dōmus and rus are construed like names of towns ; as,

Mānet dōmi, . he stays at home ; (491)

Dōmum revertitur, he returns home ; (494)

Domo arcessītus sum, I am called from home ; (495)

Vivit rūre or rūri, he lives in the country ; (491, 492)

Abiit rus, he is gone to the country ; (494)

Rediit rūre, he has returned from the country. (495.)

499. What three particular words come under this construction ?

Hūmi, militiæ, and belli, signifying place, are construed in the genitive like names of towns ; as,

Dōmi et militiæ (or belli), at home and abroad ;

Jācet hūmi, he lies upon the ground.

TIME.

500. Repeat the rules for time when and time how long.

Time when is put in the ablative; as,

Vēnit hōrā tertiā, he came at the third hour;

Die quinto decessit, he died on the fifth day.

Time how long is put in the accusative or ablative; as,

Mansit paucos dies, he stayed a few days;

Sex mensibus abfuit, he was absent six months.

501. What is the difference between the use of the accusative and ablative in this rule?

The accusative marks the continuance of time without precision, the ablative the precise period.

CONSTRUCTION OF ADVERBS.

502. What is the construction of adverbs?

Adverbs are joined to verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs, to modify or limit their signification; as,

Bēne scribit, he writes well; Fortiter pugnans, fighting bravely;

Sātis bēne, well enough; Egrege fidēlis, remarkably faithful.

503. Do adverbs ever govern a case?

Some adverbs of time, place, and quantity govern the genitive; as,

Pridie ejus diēi, the day before that day;

Ubique gentium, every where;

Sātis est verbōrum, there is enough of words.

Some derivative adverbs govern the case of their primitives; as,

Omnium optime loquitur, he speaks best of all;

Convenienter naturæ, agreeably to nature;

Vēnit obviam ei, he came to meet him;

Proxime castris or castra, next the camp.

GOVERNMENT BY PREPOSITIONS.

504. What case do the prepositions ad, apud, ante, etc., govern? (516.)

The prepositions ad, apud, ante, etc., govern the accusative; as,

Ad patrem,	to the father;
Adversus hostes,	against the enemy;
Intra muros,	within the walls.

505. What prepositions govern the ablative? (517.)

The prepositions a, ab, abs, etc., govern the ablative; as,

A patre,	from the father;
Ab illo tempore,	from that time;
Cum exercitu,	with the army.

506. What prepositions govern sometimes the accusative and sometimes the ablative?

The prepositions in, sub, super, and subter govern the accusative when motion to a place is signified; but when motion or rest in a place is signified, in and sub govern the ablative, super and subter either the accusative or ablative; as,

Vēnit in urbem,	he came into the city;
Sub iugum missus est,	he was sent under the yoke;
Jacet in terrā,	he lies upon the ground;
Bella sub mœnibus gerere,	to wage war under the walls.

507. Give some examples (1) in which the preposition is omitted before its case; (2) in which the case is omitted after the preposition.

Devenēre locos (sc. ad),	they came to the place;
Lōco mōtus est , (sc. e or de),	{ he has been dislodged from his position;
Ventum erat ad Vestæ (sc. ædem),	{ we had come to the tem- ple of Vesta.

508. What is the rule for prepositions in composition?

A preposition in composition often governs the same case as when it stands by itself; as,

Adeāmus schōlam, or	}	let us go to school;
Eāmus ad schōlam,
Exeāmus urbe, or	}	let us go out of the city.
Eāmus ex urbe,

509. When only does this rule take place?

This rule takes place only when the preposition may be separated from the verb, and placed before its case without altering its sense, as in the examples just given.

SYNTAX OF THE VERB.

MOODS.

510. What is the principal difference in the use of the indicative and of the subjunctive moods?

The indicative mood is used principally in independent or leading propositions, and the subjunctive in dependent propositions or clauses.

511. Is the indicative mood never used in dependent clauses?

The indicative mood is used in dependent and conditional clauses, to denote what is supposed or admitted as a fact; as, Si vāles, bēne est, if you are in good health, it is well.

512. Is the subjunctive ever used in independent propositions?

The subjunctive mood is used independently,

1. As a softened imperative; as, Eāmus, let us go; Moriāmur, let us die.

2. In doubtful questions; as, Quis dubitet? who can doubt? Quid aliud faceret? what else could he do?

3. After some conditional clauses with si, etsi, etiamsi, etc.; as, Si hic sis, aliter sentias, if you were here, you would think otherwise.

4. To express a wish, and after utinam; as, Vellem, I could wish; Utinam sapēres, I wish you were wise.

SEQUENCE OF TENSES.

513. What is the rule for the sequence or connection of tenses?

The rule for the sequence or connection of tenses is that the verb in the dependent clause must be of the same class with the verb in the leading clause; that is, a primary must follow a primary, and a secondary a secondary. (238.)

514. Explain this rule more particularly, and illustrate by examples.

A present, future, or perfect definite (with have) in the indicative, must be followed by a present in the subjunctive if the action is incomplete, and by a perfect if the action is complete; as,

- | | | | |
|-----------------------------------|------------------------|--------------------------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. Present , video | } quid agas , | { I see
I have seen
I will see | } what you are doing; |
| Perf. Def. , vidi | | | |
| Future , vidēbo | | | |
| 2. Present , video | } quid egēris , | { I see
I saw
I will see | } what you have done. |
| Perf. Indef. , vidi | | | |
| Future , vidēbo | | | |

An imperfect, perfect definite (without have), and pluperfect in the indicative, must be followed by an imperfect in the subjunctive if the action is incomplete, and by a pluperfect if it is complete; as,

- | | | | |
|--------------------------------------|-------------------------|--------------------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Imperfect , vidēbam | } quid agēres , | { I saw
I saw
I had seen | } what you were doing; |
| Perf. Def. , vidi | | | |
| Pluperfect , vidēram | | | |
| 2. Imperfect , vidēbam | } quid egisses , | { I saw
I saw
I had seen | } what you had done. |
| Perf. Def. , vidi | | | |
| Pluperfect , vidēram | | | |

515. Is this rule for the sequence of tenses invariable?

This rule for the sequence of tenses is not invariable, but is subject to considerable modifications arising from the time of the action which the verbs may be intended to express. An historical present, for example, though present in form, is past in time, and is, therefore, often followed by a past tense in a dependent clause. These modifications are best learned by practice.

SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD AFTER CONJUNCTIONS.

516. What conjunctions require the subjunctive mood?

The conjunctions ut, quo, and ne, denoting purpose or result, also licet, utinam, dum, dummōdo, etc., in dependent clauses, require the subjunctive mood; as,

Lēgo ut discam,	I read that I may learn;
Non ita ferreus sum	} I am not so hard-hearted as not
ut non movear,
	} to be moved;
Veritas licet nullum	} though truth obtain no defender;
defensōrem obtineat,
Utinam sapiēs,	I wish you were wise.

517. When is quo used instead of ut to denote purpose?

Quo is used instead of ut to denote purpose when it is followed by a comparative; as,

Pontem fēcit quo facilius	} he made a bridge that he might
transiret,
	} cross the more easily;
Ager arātur quo meliores	} a field is plowed in order that fētus edere possit,
	} it may produce better fruit.

518. When do ut, cum, and dum require the indicative?

Ut, cum, and dum, when they signify time merely, are followed by the indicative; as,

Ut hæc audivit,	when he heard these things;
Cum te semper dilexi,	since I have always loved you;
Dum ea Romani parant,	{ whilst the Romans are making
	{ these preparations.

519. With what kind of verbs is ut with a subjunctive idiomatically used?

Ut with a subjunctive is used after impersonal verbs signifying it happens, it remains, it follows, etc.; as,

Qui fit ut, etc.?	how does it happen that, etc.?
Restat ut, etc.,	it remains that, etc.
Sequitur ut, etc.,	it follows that, etc.

520. What is the idiomatic use of ut and ne after verbs of fearing?

After verbs of fearing, ut is used negatively and ne affirmatively; as,

Vereor ut } I fear he will not; { Vereor ne } I fear he will.
Timeo ut } { Timeo ne }

SUBJUNCTIVE AFTER THE RELATIVE.

521. When does the relative require the subjunctive?

The relative qui, quæ, quod requires the subjunctive when it refers to an indefinite, negative, or interrogative word; as,

Sunt qui dicant, there are some who say;
Nemo est qui haud intelligat, { there is no one who does { not understand;
Quis est qui utilia fugiat? { who is there that shuns
 { what is useful?

522. How is the relative used to express purpose, object, or design?

A relative with the subjunctive, in a dependent clause, is often used to express purpose, object, or design; as,

Mittunt legatos qui dicant, they send ambassadors to say.
Equitatum præmittit qui videant, { he sends forward horse{ men to see.

523. What adjectives with a relative are followed by the subjunctive?

The adjectives dignus, indignus, aptus, and idoneus, followed by a relative, take the subjunctive; as,

Dignus qui ametur, worthy to be loved;
Idoneus non est qui impetret, { he is not worthy to obtain { his request.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE IMPERATIVE.

524. What is the construction of the imperative mood?

The imperative mood is chiefly used in the second person to command, exhort, or entreat; as,

Nosce teipsum, know thyself;
De me cogitare desinite, cease to think of me.

525. For what is it chiefly used in the third person?

The third person of the imperative expresses only command, and is chiefly used in the enactment of laws; as,

Sălus popŭli suprēma lex esto, { let the safety of the people be the supreme law.

526. What is the proper negative for the imperative?

The proper negative for the imperative is ne or nēve (not non or nēque); as,

Tu ne cēde mālīs, do not yield to misfortune;

Homīnem mortuum in urbe { neither (thou shalt not) bury nor ne sepelito nēve urito, { burn a dead body in the city.

527. Instead of a simple imperative, what construction is sometimes used?

Instead of a simple imperative, sometimes fac and cave with a subjunctive, and nōli with an infinitive, are used; as,

Fac erudias, take care to instruct, or instruct;

Cāve existīmes, beware of thinking, or do not think;

Nōli timēre, do not fear.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE INFINITIVE.

528. What is the construction of the infinitive?

The infinitive mood in its general construction may be regarded as a verbal noun, and as such may be used as the subject or object of a sentence, or be governed by a noun, adjective, or preposition; as,

Mentīri est turpe, (subject) to lie is base;

Da mihi fallere, (object) grant me to deceive;

Tempus abire, (noun) time to depart;

Audax omnia perpēti, (adj.) resolute to endure all;

Nīl prāter plorāre, (prep.) nothing but to weep.

529. After what kind of verbs is the infinitive used with an accusative subject?

After verbs declarandi et sentiendi, that is, verbs of saying, hearing, feeling, knowing, believing, thinking, etc., the infinitive has an accusative before it as its subject; as,

Dixit se intelligere, he said that he understood;

Crēdunt se negligi, they believe themselves to be neglected.

530. How are the accusative and infinitive to be translated in these cases?

When the infinitive has an accusative subject before it, the accusative must be translated by the nominative with the word “that” before it, and the infinitive as a personal verb, as in the examples just given.

531. On what does the time of the infinitive depend in such constructions?

The time of an infinitive, that is, the English tense by which it is to be translated, depends on the tense of the leading verb, or verb that precedes it.

State and exemplify this more fully.

I. A present infinitive, after a present or future, is present; after a past, is a past imperfect; as,

Dicit se scribere, he says that he writes, or is writing;

Dicet se scribere, he will say that he writes, or is writing;

Dixit se scribere, he said that he wrote, or was writing.

II. A perfect infinitive, after a present or future, is perfect; after a past, is pluperfect; as,

Dicit se scripsisse, he says that he wrote, or did write;

Dicet se scripsisse, he will say that he wrote, or did write;

Dixit se scripsisse, he said that he had written.

III. A future infinitive, after a present or future, is future; after a past, is a past potential; as,

Dicit se scripturum esse, he says that he will write;

Dicet se scripturum esse, he will say that he will write;

Dixit se scripturum esse, he said that he would write.

IV. A future perfect infinitive, after a present, future, or past, is translated by “would have,” as,

Dicit	} se scriptūrum	{	he says that he	} would have
Dicet			he will say that he		written.
Dixit			he said that he

HISTORICAL INFINITIVE.

532. What is the historical infinitive, and how is it translated?

When a nominative is followed by an infinitive without an intervening verb the infinitive is called the historical infinitive, and is translated as if it were an imperfect indicative of the same verb, to which it is considered equivalent; as,

Romāni festināre, or Romāni festinābant;
Alius alium hortāri, or Alius alium hortābatur.

533. By what verb is this infinitive supposed to be governed?

The historical infinitive is governed by cæpit or cæpērunt understood, according as the nominative is singular or plural.

ORATIO DIRECTA AND ORATIO OBLIQUA.

534. Explain what is meant by the oratio directa and the oratio obliqua.

When a writer or speaker expresses his own thoughts or those of another in the very words used, the construction is called the oratio directa, or direct address; but when he only reports the words as what the writer or speaker thought or said, the construction is changed into the accusatiæ and infinitive, and is called the oratio obliqua, or indirect address.

Thus, Cicero says (oratio directa), “Cupio me esse clementem,” “Meam dōmum firmioribus præsidiis munīvi.” A writer or speaker reporting these would say (oratio obliqua), Cicero dixit se cupere esse clementem; Cicero dixit se suam dōmum firmioribus præsidiis munivisse. In like manner,

(Directa), Plāto in Italiā vēnit, Plato came into Italy;
 (Obliqua), { Ferunt Platōnem in Italiā venisse, } they say that Plato came into Italy;

- (Directa), { "Actum est de exercitu," } he exclaimed, "It is all clamāvit, } over with the army;"
- (Obliqua), { Actum esse de exercitu, } he exclaimed that it was clamāvit, } all over with the army.

PARTICIPLES.

535. What is the construction of participles?

Participles, besides agreeing, like adjectives, with their nouns in gender, number, and case, govern the case of their own verb; as,

Anīmus se non videns, the mind not seeing itself;
Hōmo fraude cārens, a man wanting guile. (473.)

GERUNDS.

536. How is the gerund, in its different cases, governed?

(1) The gerund in di, of the genitive cases, is governed by substantives or adjectives; as,

Tempus legendi, time of reading;
Cupidus discendi, desirous of learning.

(2) The gerund in do, of the dative case, is governed by adjectives signifying usefulness or fitness; as,

Charta utilis scribendo, paper useful for writing.

(3) The gerund in dum, of the accusative case, is governed by the prepositions ad, inter, etc.; as,

Ad intelligendum, to understand;
Inter docendum, in time of teaching.

(4) The gerund in do, of the ablative case, is governed by the prepositions a, ab, de, ex, or in, or is used without a preposition as the ablative of manner or cause; as,

Pœna a peccando absterret, { punishment frightens from sinning;
Memoria excolendo augētur, { the memory is improved by exercising it;
Defessus sum ambulando, I am weary with walking.

537. Is the gerund ever used in a passive sense?

The gerund, in a few passages, is used in a passive sense; namely,

Spes restituendi, (Nep.) the hope of being restored;
Causa censendi, (Cic.) for the purpose of being enrolled;
Ad imperandum, (Sall.) to receive orders;
Urit videndo, (Virg.) she inflames by being seen.

GERUNDIVES.

538. Instead of the gerund with the accusative, what other construction is considered more elegant?

Gerunds governing the accusative are elegantly turned into gerundives in dus, which agree with their substantives in gender, number, and case.

539. In changing the gerund into the gerundive, what rule must be observed?

In changing the gerund into the gerundive, the governed accusative must be put in the case of the gerund, and the gerundive made to agree with it in gender, number, and case; as,

Gerund,	Tempus petendi pācem,	} time of seeking peace;
Gerundive,	Tempus petendæ pācis,
Gerund,	Ad petendum pācem,	} to seeking peace;
Gerundive,	Ad petendam pācem,
Gerund,	A petendo pācem,	} from seeking peace.
Gerundive,	A petenda pāce,

540. Can this construction be reversed?

This construction may be reversed by changing the gerundive into the gerund, which must be put in the case of the noun, and the noun itself in the accusative case; as,

Consilia urbis delendæ, or Consilia urbem delendi;
Ad defendendam Romam, or Ad defendendum Romam;
In diripiendis castris, or In diripiendo castra.

541. What is the idiomatic use of the gerundive with est?

The gerundive with est implies necessity, or that something must be done, and takes the agent or doer in the dative; as,

Legendum est mihi,	I must read;
Scribendum est tibi,	you must write;
Moriendum est omnibus,	all must die.

SUPINES.

542. What is the construction of the supine in um?

The supine in um is put after verbs of motion, to express the object of that motion; as,

Abiit deambulatum,	he has gone to walk;
Venerunt questum,	they came to complain.

543. Is the supine in um never put after any other verbs than those of motion?

The supine in um is sometimes put after other verbs than those of motion; as,

Dedit filiam nuptum,	he gave his daughter to be married;
Revocatus defensum patrum,	recalled to defend his country.

544. Do supines govern any case?

The supine in um governs the case of its own verb; as,

Spectatum ludos veniunt,	they come to see the games;
Non servitum matribus ibo,	{ I shall not go to serve the dames. (435.)

545. What is the construction of the supine in u?

The supine in u is put after adjectives signifying pleasure or pain, ease or difficulty, worthiness or unworthiness, etc.; as,

Jacundum auditu,	pleasant to hear;
Facile dictu,	easy to say;
Honestum factu,	honorable to do.

546. Is the supine in u ever used after nouns?

The supine in u is used after the nouns fas, nēfas, and opus; as,

Fas est dictu,	Nēfas est dictu,	Opus est dictu,
it is right to say;	it is wrong to say;	it is necessary to say.

CONJUNCTIONS.

547. What is the construction of conjunctions?

The conjunctions et, ac, atque, nec, nēque, aut, vel, and some others, connect like cases of nouns and like moods and tenses of verbs; also clauses in the same construction; as,

Honōra patrem et matrem, honor your father and mother;

Nec lēgit nec scrībit, he neither reads nor writes;

Concīdunt venti, fugiuntque nūbes, { the winds lull, and the clouds fly away.

548. Are the cases connected by conjunctions never unlike?

The cases connected by conjunctions are sometimes unlike, but the construction is the same; that is, the words so connected are in the same government; as,

Mea et reipublicæ interest, it concerns me and the republic;

Constitit asse et plūris, it cost a shilling and more.

549. How is this to be explained?

The first example is explained by reference to the rules 447, 448, and the second by rules 466, 467.

450. What is it useful to know with regard to conjunctions which go in pairs?

With regard to conjunctions which go in pairs, it is useful to know how they are to be translated. The following are some of the most common:

Et—et,
Et—que,
Que—que,
Cum—tum,

} both—and.

Aut—aut,
Vel—vel,

} either—or.

Sive—sive, { either—or;
 { whether—or.

Nec—nec,
Nec—neque,
Neque—neque,

} neither—nor.

Tum—tum, { both—and;
 { not only—but also;
 { at one time—at another.

551. After what kind of words are ac and atque translated "as" and "than"?

After words expressing similarity or dissimilarity, ac and atque are translated "as" and "than"; as,

Facis ac si me rôges, you do as if you should ask me;

Me cõlet æque atque patronum suum, {he shows me as much attention as if I were his patron;

Si aliter scribo ac sentio, if I write otherwise than I think.

552. What is the general rule with regard to the mood to be used after conjunctions?

Conjunctions which do not imply doubt or contingency are followed by the indicative; those which imply doubt, contingency, or dependence, by the subjunctive.

PROSODY.

1. What is prosody?

PROSODY is that part of grammar which treats of the quantity of syllables and the laws of versification, or making of verses.

2. What is meant by the quantity of a syllable?

The quantity of a syllable means the time which is taken up in pronouncing it.

3. As to their length, how are syllables divided?

Syllables are either long, short, or common.

4. In regard to quantity, what is the difference between a long and a short syllable?

A long syllable takes twice as much time to pronounce it as a short syllable; thus, in ămăre, the second a is twice as long as the first. A long syllable, therefore, is equal two short ones, and two short ones are equal to one long.

5. What is meant by a syllable being common?

A syllable is said to be common which, in verse, is sometimes long and sometimes short; as u in volūcris, which may be pronounced in poetry volūcris or volūcris, as the metre requires.

6. How is the quantity of a syllable determined?

The quantity of a syllable is determined by certain rules, and when none of these applies to it, it is said to be long or short by authority; that is, the usage of the poets. Thus i in lorīca is long, and e in rēgo is short by authority.

7. Is a final syllable ever long or short by authority?

A final syllable is never long or short by authority.

8. Into what two parts may the rules of prosody be divided?

The rules of prosody may be divided into General Rules, or rules which apply to all syllables, and Special Rules, or rules which apply to particular syllables.

GENERAL RULES.

SHORT SYLLABLES.

9. What is the general rule for short syllables?

A vowel before another vowel, in Latin words, is short; as, mēus, alius, nihil (h being considered only as a breathing); in Greek words it is varied, though mostly long.

10. What are the exceptions to this rule?

Exc. 1. The first syllable is long in āer, dīus, ēheu, and in the penult of aulāi, terrāi, Pompēi, and like words. The first syllable of ohe and Diana is common.

Exc. 2. E is long before i in the genitive and dative of the fifth declension; as, diēi, speciēi.

Exc. 3. I is long in the tenses of fīo when not followed by r; as, fīunt, fīebam, fīeri, fīerem. I is common in genitives in ius; as, illius or illūs: but in alterius it is always short, in alius (gen.) long.

LONG SYLLABLES.

11. What are the general rules for long syllables?

(1) A vowel before two single consonants, or one double consonant (j, x, z) is long by position; as, ārma, fāllo, mājor, āxis, gāza. But the compounds of jugum have i short before j; as, bījūgus, quadrijūgus.

12. What is the exception to this rule?

A vowel (naturally short and in the same syllable) before a mute when l or r follows is common in poetry, but in prose is short; as, āgris or āgris, pharētra or pharētra.

(2) A diphthong is always long; as, aūrum, Cāesar. But præ in composition, when followed by a vowel, is short; as, præire, præustus: also a diphthong in the end of a word when the next word begins with a vowel is sometimes made short; as, insulæ Ionio, etc.

13. What is to be remarked as to u followed by a vowel?

In prosody u followed by a vowel is not regarded as a diphthong; as, quætio, quæror, linguâ.

(3) The prepositions a, e, de, se, di, and monosyllables generally are long. But di is short in the compounds dirimo and disertus. Re also in compounds is short, except in the impersonal verb rêfert.

(4) A contracted syllable is always long; as, côgo for coago, nîl for nîhil, nôlo for non volo, scîlicet for scîre licet, etc.

SPECIAL RULES.

FIRST AND MIDDLE SYLLABLES.

14. What is the rule for perfects and supines of two syllables, and what are the exceptions?

PERFECTS and SUPINES of two syllables have the first long; as, vēni, vīdi, vīci, vīsum, cāsum, mōtum.

Exc. 1. THE PERFECTS bibi, dēdi, fīdi from findo, scīdi, stēti, stīti, and tūli.

Exc. 2. THE SUPINES citum from cio, dātum, itum, litum, rātum, rūtum, sātum, situm, and stātum.

15. What is the rule for perfects which double the first syllable, and what are the exceptions?

PERFECTS which double the first syllable have both short, unless the latter be long by position; as, cēcīdi from cādo, didīci, pēpūli, tētēdi, except cēcīdi from cædo, and pepēdi.

16. What is the rule for supines of more than two syllables, and what are the exceptions?

In SUPINES of more than two syllables a, e, u are long and i is short before tum; as, amātum, delētum, indūtum, monītum. But i is long in divīsum, also in supines in itum from a perfect in ivi; as, cupīvi, cupītum; audīvi, audītum.

17. What is the rule for desiderative verbs in urio?

Desideratives in urio shorten u before r; as, esūrio, esūris, esūrit: but other verbs in urio lengthen it; as, ligūrio, ligūris; scatūrio, scatūris.

18. What is the rule for u in participles in urus?

PARTICIPLES in urus have u long in the penult; as, amatūrus, monitūrus, doctūrus, auditūrus.

19. What is the rule for a, e, i, o, u in the first part of a compound, and what are the exceptions?

In the first part of a compound a is long, e, i, o, and u are short; as, mālo, trādo; nēfas, nēque; bīmaris, omnīpotens; hōdie, sacrōsanctus, dūcenti, quadrūpes.

Exc. 1. I is long in words varied by cases; as, quīdam, quīvis: or when the words can be taken separately; as, ludimagister, lucrīfacio.

Exc. 2. I in the masculine of īdem is long; in the neuter, short, īdem.

Exc. 3. I is long in ubīque, ibīdem; doubtful in ubīvis, ubīcunque.

Exc. 4. I in the compounds of dies is long; as, bīduum, merīdies: but in quotīdies, quotīdianus, i is sometimes short. (See 67.)

INCREASE OF NOUNS.

20. When is a noun said to increase?

A noun is said to increase when it has a syllable or syllables more in any other case than in the nominative singular.

21. When is it said to increase in the plural?

A noun is said to increase in the plural when it has a syllable more than in the nominative plural.

22. What syllable or syllables are the increase?

The penult and antepenult syllables are the increase. The last syllable is never an increase. Thus in rex, rēgis, re in rēgis is the increase; in īter, ītinēris, tī and nē are the increase; in puer, puērī, puērōrum, ō is the plural increase.

FIRST DECLENSION.

23. What is the rule for the increase of the first declension?

The first declension has no increase in the singular. It increases only in the genitive plural, and in the dative and ablative plural of the few nouns which make ābus; in all these cases the a is long; as, pennārum, deābus.

SECOND DECLENSION.

24. What is the rule for the increase of the second declension?

The increase of the second declension is always short; as, gēner, gēnēri; vīr, vīri; sātur, sāturi. Except Iber and its compounds; as, Ibēri, Celtibēri.

THIRD DECLENSION.

25. What is the rule for the increase of the third declension?

In the increase of the third declension, a and o are long; e, i, and u, short: as, piētas, piētātis; hōnor, honōris; mulier, mulieris; lāpis, lapīdis; murmur, murmūris.

EXCEPTIONS.

26. What are the exceptions in A?

The exceptions in a are masculines in al and ar; as, Hannibal, Hannibālīs; Cæsar, Cæsāris; vas, vādīs; daps, dāpis; and the increase of mās, ānas, pār and its compounds, baccar, hēpar, jūbar, lār, nectar, and sāl: Greek nouns which make the genitive in adis, or which, ending in ā, make ātis; as, lampas, lampādis; poēma, poemātis.

27. What are the exceptions in E?

Hæres, locūples, merces, quies, vēr, seps, lex, rex, vervex, hūlec, plebs, mansues, lēbes, increase long. Also Greek nouns in er and es; as, crāter, cratēris; magnes, magnētis: but aer and aether increase short; as, aēris, aethēris.

28. What are the exceptions in I?

Dīs, glīs, līs, Quīris, Samnis; as, Quīris, Quirītis: nouns and adjectives in ix (including Greek nouns in yx), which make icis in the genitive; as, cervix, cervicis; felix, felicis; also vībex:

Gryps and Greek nouns in is and in, which make inis in the genitive; as, Salāmis, Salamīnis; delphin, delphīnis.

29. What are the exceptions in O?

Neuters that make oris in the genitive; as, corpus, corpōris; marmor, marmōris: proper names; as, Hector, Hectōris: words in obs and ops; as, scrobs, scrōbis; īnops, inōpis. Shorten also arbor, mēmōr, compos, impos, and bōs. Ador has adōris or adōris. Gentile nouns generally increase short; as, Macēdo, Macedōnis.

30. What are the exceptions in U?

Nouns in us and ur, which make uris, utis, and udis in the genitive; as, mūs, mūris; virtus, virtūtis; pālus, palūdis. But Ligus makes Ligūris; pēcus, pecūdis; and intercus, intercūtis. Fūr, lux, Pollux have increase long; furfur, murmur, sulphur, vultur, short.

PLURAL INCREASE.

31. What is the rule for increase in the plural?

In the increase of the plural a, e, o are long, i and u short; as, turbæ, turbārum; rēs, rērum; puēri, puerōrum; mōres, morīlus; lācus, lacūbus.

INCREASE OF VERBS.

32. When is a verb said to increase?

A verb is said to increase when it has one or more syllables in any part of it than in the second person singular of the present indicative active.

33. What are the increase syllables?

The increase syllables are those preceding the last. The last is never an increase syllable.

34. May a verb have more than one increase syllable?

A verb in the active voice may have as many as three increase syllables; and in the passive four:

(A-mas), a-ma¹-mus, a-ma¹-ba²-mus, a-ma¹-ve²-ra³-mus.

(Au-dis), au-di¹-tur, au-dim¹-in²-i, au-di¹-e²-ba³-tur, au-di¹-e²-ba³-mīn⁴-i.

35. What is the rule for the increase of verbs?

In the increase of verbs a, e, o are long, i and u short; as, amāmus, docēmus, regimus, possūmus.

NOTE.—The same rule as for the plural increase of nouns.

EXCEPTIONS.

36. What are the exceptions in A?

A is short in the first increase of do and its compounds of the first conjugation; as, dātis, dābamus, circumdāre.

37. What are the exceptions in E?

E before r in the third conjugation, and before ram, rim, ro, and in beris is short. But in ērunt, ēre of the perfect indicative active, ēris, ēre of the future indicative passive, and in rēris, rēre of the imperfect subjunctive passive, e is long.

NOTE.—Erunt of the perfect is sometimes shortened by the poets; as, dedērunt, stetērunt. (See 98.)

38. What are the exceptions in O?

There are no exceptions in o.

39. What are the exceptions in I?

I before r is long; also in the first increase of the fourth conjugation, except imus of the perfect; as, audīvi, audītus, audivimus. I is also long in sīmus, sītis, velimus, velītis, and their compounds. I in rimus, ritis, of the future perfect and perfect subjunctive, is sometimes lengthened by the poets.

40. What are the exceptions in U?

For exceptions in u, see Special Rules, 17 and 18.

PENULT SYLLABLES.

41. What is the rule for the penult of patronymics?

Patronymics in ides and ades shorten the penult, unless they come from nouns in eus; as, Priamīdes, Atlantiādes; Pelides, Tydīdes (from Peleus and Tydeus). Patronymics and similar words in ais, eis, itis, ine, and one, lengthen the penult; as, Achāis, Chrysēis, Memphītis, Nerīne, Acrisiōne. In Thebāis, Phocāis, the penult is short, in Nereus it is common.

42. What is the rule for the penult of adjectives in acus, icus, idus, imus?

Adjectives in acus, icus, idus, and imus for the most part shorten the penult; as, Ægyptiācus, rusticus, lepīdus, legitīmus.

43. What adjectives are exceptions to this rule?

Except opācus, amīcus, aprīcus, pudicus, mendicus, antīquus, postīcus, infīdus (from fīdo; but perfīdus—from per and fīdes), bīmus, opīmus, quadrīmus, patrīmus and matrīmus.

44. What is the rule for the penult of adjectives in alis, anus, arus, etc.?

Adjectives in alis, anus, arus, emus, ivus, orus, and osus lengthen the penult; as, dotālis, urbānus, ignārus, postrēmus, æstivus, decōrus, arenōsus. Except barbārus and opipārus.

45. What is the rule for the penult of adjectives in ilis?

Verbals in ilis shorten the penult, those derived from nouns lengthen it; as, fertilis (from fēro), agilis (from āgo), civilis (from cīvis), hostilis (from hostis).

46. What addition is to be made to this rule?

Exilis, subtilis, and the names of months, as Aprīlis, have the penult long; humilis, parālis, similis, and all adjectives in atilis, as, versatilis, volatilis, short.

47. What is the rule for the penult of adjectives in inus?

Adjectives in inus, derived from inanimate things, as trees, plants, stones, and from adverbs of time, shorten the penult; as, fagīnus, crocīnus, adamantīnus, crastīnus, diutīnus. Other adjectives lengthen it; as, agnīnus, marīnus.

48. What is the rule for diminutives?

Diminutives in olus, ola, olum, and ulus, ula, ulum shorten the penult; as, urceōlus, filiōla, lectūlus, corcūlum.

49. What is the rule for the penult of adverbs in tim?

Adverbs in tim lengthen the penult; as, oppidātīm, virītīm, tribūtīm. Except affātīm, perpētīm, stātīm.

50. What is the rule for desideratives in urio?

Desideratives in urio shorten u before r; as, esūrio, esūris, esurit: but other verbs in urio lengthen it; as, ligurio, liguris, ligurit; scaturio, scaturis, etc.

FINAL SYLLABLES.

51. What is the rule for A final, and exceptions?

A in the end of words declined by cases is short; as, musă, templă. Except the ablative of the first declension and Greek vocatives; as, pennă, O Æneă.

A in the end of words not declined by cases is long; as, amă, frustră, ergă.

Exc. A is short in ejă, ită, quiă, and pută (adverb): in numerals in ginta; as, trigintă: in contră and ultră, when prepositions, a is short; when adverbs, long: in postea it is common.

52. What are the rules for E final, and exceptions?

E in the end of words is short; as, nătě, sedîlě, regěrě: but in words of the first and fifth declensions and in Greek plurals e is long; as, Anchisě, Calliopě, fidě, cetě, metě.

Monosyllables in e are long; as, mě, tě, sě. But enclitics, quě, ně, vě, and syllabics, ptě, cě, tě, are short.

E in the second person singular of verbs of the second conjugation is long; as, moně, docě: but in cave, vale, and vide sometimes short.

E in adverbs from adjectives of the first and second declensions, and in superlatives, is long; as, placidě, pulchrě, doctissimě, fortissimě: but beně, malě, magě, inferně, and superně are short.

53. What is the rule for I final, and exceptions?

I in the end of words is long; as, dominî, patrî: but in Greek datives and vocatives short; as, Palladî, Tethyî, Alexî, Parî, Troasî or Troasîn (pl.).

In mîhi, tîbi, sîbi, îbi, ûbi, nîsi, quăsi, îti, and cui as a dissyllable, i is varied; in sicutî, sicubî, and necubî, always short.

54. What is the rule for O final, and exceptions?

O in the end of words is common; as, amō, virgō, quandō: but in the dative and ablative of the second declension it is long; as, dominō, librō.

Exc. 1. In Greek nouns and in monosyllables o is long; as, Didō, Athō, Ō, dō, stō. Also in quō and eō, and their compounds, quōvis, quōcūque, adeō, ideō, illō, idcirco, citrō, intrō, retrō, ultrō, ergō.

Exc. 2. O is short in egō, sciō, cedō (defective), homō, citō, illicō, immō, duō, ambō, modō and its compounds quomodō, dunmodō, postmodō. But some of these have o common.

55. What is the rule for U and Y final?

U in the end of words is long; y is short; as, vultū, molī.

56. What is the rule for words ending in B, D, L, R, T?

Words ending in b, d, l, r, t make the foregoing vowel short; as, āb, illūd, consūl, patēr, capūt.

57. What are the exceptions to this rule?

Sāl, sōl, nīl are long: also aēr and aethēr, and nouns in er that make ērīs in the genitive; as, eratēr, eratēris; vēr, vērīs. Fār, lār, nār, pār, cūr, and fūr are long.

58. What is the rule for M in the end of words?

M with the foregoing vowel is cut off from the end of a word when the next word begins with a vowel: otherwise the syllable is short; as, militūm octo in prose, but milit' octo in poetry. (See 93.) Hence the final syllables of cum and circum in compounds are short; as, cōmedo, circūmago.

59. What is the rule for C and N in the end of words, and exceptions?

Vowels before c and n in the end of words are long; as, āc, sīc, illūc, ēn, nōn. Nēc, fāc, and donēc are short; hic and hoc (not the ablative) are common. Shorten also forsān, forsitān, īn, tamēn, and ēn' by apostrophe; as, vidēn' (for videsne): and nouns in en which increase short; as, carmēn, carmīnis.

60. What is the rule for AS, ES, OS final?

As, es, os in the end of words are long; as, pietās, quiēs, virōs.

61. What are the exceptions in AS?

Anās and Greek nouns in as which make ādis in the genitive have as short; as, lampās, lampādīs.

62. What are the exceptions in ES?

Final es is short in nouns which increase short in the genitive; as, hospēs, hospītis; limēs, limitis: long in abiēs, ariēs, Cerēs, pariēs, pēs and its compounds. Es from sum is short, from ēdo (to eat) long. The preposition penēs is short. Es is short in Greek neuters, and in the plural of Greek nouns of the third declension which do not make the genitive in eos; as, cocoethēs, Troēs.

63. What are the exceptions in OS?

Os is short in compōs, impōs, and ōs (a bone), and in Greek nouns of the second declension, and in the genitive of those which make the genitive in os; as, chaōs, epōs, Palladōs.

64. What is the rule for IS, US, and IS final?

Is, us, and ys in the end of words are short; as, turrīs, bonūs, Capjys. But plural cases in is and us (except bus) are long; as, bonīs, fructūs; in regibūs and the like us is short.

65. Mention some further exceptions in IS and US.

Exc. 1. Is is long in nouns which increase long in inīs, itīs, or entīs; as, Salamīs, Salamīnīs; Samnīs, Samnītīs; Simoīs, Simoēntīs: in the second person singular of verbs whose second person plural has the penult long in itīs; as, audīs, audītīs; fīs, fītīs; sīs, sītīs: in glīs, vīs, grātīs, forīs, i is long.

Exc. 2. Monosyllables in us are long; as, mūs, grūs, rūs. Us is also long in nouns which make the genitive in ūrīs, ūtīs, ūdis, untīs, or ōdis; as tellūs, -ūrīs; virtūs, -ūtīs; incūs, -ūdis; tripūs, -ōdis. Panthūs, voc. Panthū.

DERIVATIVE AND COMPOUND WORDS.

66. What is the rule for derivative and compound words?

Derivative words follow the quantity of their primitives, and compound words the quantity of the words of which they are compounded.

67. Are there many exceptions to the rule for derivative words?

The exceptions to the rule for derivative words are numerous; they are best learned as they occur.

68. What is the general rule for the vowels in the first part of a compound?

In the first part of a compound a, if not a preposition, is long; e, i, o, u, y, short; as, mālo, quāpropter, trādo; nēfas, valēdico, hujuscēmodi; omnipotens, trīceps; hōdie, quandōquidem; dūcenti, locūples; Polýdorŭs, Eurýpylus.

69. Give some exceptions to this rule?

E is long in nēmo, nēquis, nēquando, nēquidquam, and the like; also in vēcors, vēsanus, vēneficus, and compounds of se for sex; as, sēdecim, sēstris.

I is long in words varied by cases, or when the compounding words can be taken separately; as, quīvis, quīdam; ludimagister, lucrīfacio. I in the masculine of īdem is long; in the neuter short, īdem; it is also long in ubīque, ibīdem, but in ubivis, ubicunque, doubtful. In the compounds of dies, i is long; as, bīduum, merīdies, prīdem; but in quotīdie, quotīdianus, it is sometimes short.

U is long in Jūpiter, jūdex, jūdicium, and in compounds of usus; as, usūcapio.

70. What is the rule for pro in the first part of a compound?

The Greek pro is short; as, prōpheta, prōlogus: the Latin pro usually long.

71. Mention some words in which pro is short.

Pro is short in prōcella, prōfanus, prōfari, prōficiscor, prōfestus, prōfecto, prōfiteor, prōfugus, prōfundus, prōnepos, prōpero, prōtercus.

72. In what words is pro doubtful?

Pro is doubtful in propāgo, both noun and verb, in propīno, profundo, procūro, propello, propulso, and in Proserpīna.

73. How is the quantity of the last syllable of every verse regarded?

The last syllable of every verse is regarded as common, or rather long, on account of the pause or suspension of the voice naturally made in passing to the next line.

VERSIFICATION.

74. What is verse?

A VERSE is a certain number of long and short syllables succeeding each other according to some fixed rule, and forming what is called a line of poetry.

75. What is scanning?

SCANNING means the division of a verse into its proper feet.

76. What is a foot?

A FOOT is the measure of a verse: that is, a verse is divided into certain parts, each of which is called a foot.

77. Do verse and metre mean the same thing?

A verse is, strictly speaking, a line of poetry; its metre, or measure, is the number and kind of feet into which it is divided.

78. Is a single foot always a measure?

In anapæstic, iambic, and trochaic verse, a metre, or measure, consists of two feet; but in other kinds of verse a single foot constitutes a measure.

CÆSURAL PAUSE.

79. What is the cæsural pause?

The cæsural pause is a natural pause or break which we make in reading a line of poetry, as in the following:

Not a drum was heard, || not a funeral note,
 As his corse || to the ramparts we hurried;
 Not a soldier discharged || his farewell shot
 O'er the grave || where our hero we buried.
 We buried him darkly || in the dead of night,
 The sods || with our bayonets turning,
 By the struggling moonbeams' || misty light,
 And our lanterns || dimly burning.

80. What is meant by cæsura in scanning?

CÆSURA in scanning is when a syllable of a word is left after a foot is completed; as,

At domus | interi | or re | gali | splendida | luxu.

Sylves | trem tenu | i mu | sam medi | taris a | vena.

Here or in the first line, and trem, i, sam in the second, are cæsural syllables.

81. Is an attention to cæsura a matter of any importance?

The beauty and melody of a verse depend greatly on the cæsura: without it poetry differs but little from prose; as,

Romæ | mænia | terruit | impiger | Hannibal | armis.

82. What is considered the most beautiful place for the cæsural pause, and what the least?

In hexameter verse the most beautiful place for the cæsural pause is at the first half of the third foot; as in the line

At domus | interi | or || re | gali | splendida | luxu.

The least beautiful that which divides the line into two equal parts; as in

Exple | ri men | tem nequit || ardes | citque tu | endo.

HEROIC HEXAMETER.

83. Why is heroic hexameter so called?

Heroic hexameter is called heroic because it is the kind of verse employed to describe lofty actions, or the actions of heroes; and hexameter because it consists of six feet.

84. What are the feet employed in heroic verse?

The feet employed in heroic verse are the dactyl, consisting of one long and two short syllables; as, dōmīnūs (- ∪ ∪): and the spondee, consisting of two long syllables; as, rēgēs (- -).

85. What other feet, besides the spondee and dactyl, are used by Horace?

Besides the spondee and dactyl, Horace uses the

Iambus,	∪ -	Choriambus,	- ∪ ∪ -
Trochee,	- ∪	Epitritus secundus,	- ∪ - -
Pyrrhic,	∪ ∪	Bacchiūs (āmāndō),	∪ - -

86. Of what feet does hexameter consist?

In hexameter verse the first four feet may be either dactyls or spondees, the fifth is regularly a dactyl, and the sixth always a spondee; as in the following scheme:

^{1.} ^{2.} ^{3.} ^{4.} ^{5.} ^{6.}
 - - - | - - - | - - - | - - - | - - - | - -
 - - - | - - - | - - - | - - - | - - - | - -

87. How is the foot in the fifth place sometimes varied?

A spondee is sometimes used in the fifth place, and the line is then called spondaic; as,

Cără dē | ūm sōbō | lēs māg | nūm Jōvīs | încrē | mēntūm.

88. What is the greatest number of syllables, and what the least, that can be used in a line of hexameter?

The greatest number of syllables that can be used in a hexameter is seventeen, when all the feet, except the last, are dactyls; as,

Quădrupē | dântē pū | trēm sōnī | tū quătīt | ūngulă | cāmpūm.

The least number is thirteen, when all the feet, except the fifth, are spondees; as,

Întōn | sī crī | nēs lōn | gā cēr | vîcē flū | ēbānt.

FIGURES OF SCANNING.

89. What is meant by a figure in scanning?

By a figure in scanning is meant certain changes upon words, to adapt them to the verse in scanning.

90. What are the principal of these?

The principal figures in scanning are synalœpha, ecthlipsis, synaphœa, synærêsis, diærêsis, systôle, and diastôle.

SYNALŒPHA.

91. What is synalœpha?

SYNALŒPHA is the cutting off of a vowel or diphthong in the end of a word, when the next word begins with a vowel; as,

Conticuere omnes, intentique ora tenebant;

which is scanned thus:

Cōnticū | ēr' ōm | nēs īn | tēntī | qu' ōră tē | nēbānt.

92. In what words does synalœpha seldom take place?

Synalœpha seldom takes place in the interjections O, heu, pro, vœ, vah, hei, and the like; as,

Hœu! ŭbĭ | pœctă fĭd | ēs ŭbĭ | qŭœ jŭr | ārē sŏ | lēbās.

ECTHLIPSIS.

93. What is ecthlipsis?

ECTHLIPSIS is the cutting off of m with the vowel before it in the end of a word when the next word begins with a vowel or a silent h; as,

Monstrum horrendum, informe, ingens, cui lumen ademptum;
which is scanned,

Mōnstr' hŏr | rēnd' ĩn | fŏrm' ĩn | gēns cŭi | lŭmēn ă | dēmp̄tŭm.

SYNAPHŒA.

94. What is synaphœa?

SYNAPHŒA is the application of synalœpha and ecthlipsis to the end of a line which seems to have a superfluous syllable. When this is the case, the line will be found to end either with a vowel or m, and the next line to begin with a vowel. In the first case synalœpha applies, and in the second ecthlipsis, and the two lines are read continuously; as,

Omnia Mercurio similis, vocemque colorem | que
Et flavos crines, etc. Scanned, color' et, etc.

Jamque iter emensi, turres ac tecta Latino | rum
Ardua cernebant, etc. Scanned Latinor' Ardua, etc.

95. Are the three foregoing figures to be regarded in reading Latin verse?

The three foregoing figures are to be regarded only in scanning, not in reading, Latin verse.

SYNÆRESIS.

96. What is synæresis?

SYNÆRESIS is the contraction of two syllables into one; as, eä into ā, eī into ī, eō into ō, iis into īs, etc., as in the following lines:

Seu lenta fuerint alvearia (alvāria) vimine texta.
Centum aerii (aerī) claudunt vectes æternaque ferri.
Deturbat laxatque foros simul accipit alveo (alvō).
Connubiis (connubis) arvisque novis operata juvenus.

DIÆRESIS.

97. What is diæresis?

DIÆRESIS is the opposite of synæresis, and divides one syllable into two; as, auræ into aurai, sylva into sylva, milvus into miluus, suadent into suaðent, etc., as in the following lines:

Æthereum sensum, atque aurai simplicis ignem.
Nunc mare, nunc siluæ. (Hor.)

SYSTOLE AND DIASTOLE.

98. What are systole and diastole?

SYSTOLE and DIASTOLE are the opposites of each other. The former shortens a syllable long by nature or by position; as, abjicit for abjicit, stetērunt and dedērunt for stetērunt and dedērunt. The latter lengthens a short syllable; thus, rē short is lengthened by diastole in the following line, and elsewhere:

Rēligione patrum multos servata per annos.

By many systole and diastole are considered poetic licenses rather than figures of prosody.

99. What do you understand by the words ictus, arsis, thesis?

Ictus (stroke), which is the same as arsis (elevation), means that syllable of a foot on which a particular stress of voice is laid, and thesis (depression) that on which no stress is laid. The natural place for the arsis is on the long syllable of a foot. Hence in hexameter the arsis always falls on the first part of a foot, and by this a syllable naturally short is sometimes made long.

FIGURES OF ETYMOLOGY.

100. What is a figure of etymology?

A figure of etymology is an unusual manner of writing a word.

101. Mention some of these figures.

PROSTHESIS is the prefixing of a letter or syllable to a word; as gnatus for natus.

APHÆRESIS is the taking away of a letter or syllable from a word; as 'st for est.

EPENTHESIS is the insertion of a letter or syllable in the middle of a word; as alĭtuum for alĭtum.

SYNCOPE is the omission of a letter or syllable in the middle of a word; as dĕum for dĕŏrum.

PARAGOGE is the addition of a letter or syllable to the end of a word; as claudier for claudi.

APOCOPE is the omission of a letter or syllable from the end of a word; as men' for mĕne.

CRASSIS is the contraction of two vowels into one; as cōgo for coăgo.

ANTITHESIS is the substitution of one letter for another; as olli for illi.

METATHESIS is the changing of the order of the letters in a word; as, pistris for pristis.

FIGURES OF SYNTAX.

102. What is a figure of syntax?

A figure of syntax is a deviation in some particular from the ordinary construction.

103. What are the figures of syntax?

The figures of syntax are ellipsis, pleonasm, enallăge, and hyperbăton.

104. What is ellipsis?

ELLIPSIS is the omission of one or more words in a sentence, which the context readily suggests. The word or words omitted are then said to be understood.

105. What are the words most commonly omitted?

The words most commonly omitted or understood are:

1. The personal pronouns with verbs; as, căno, sc. ego; moriămur, sc. nos.

2. The indefinite homĭnes with such verbs as aiunt, fĕrunt, trădunt, sc. homĭnes.

3. Templum or Ēdes before the name of deities; as, a Vestăe, sc. a templo Vestăe; ad Jŏvis, sc. ad ædem Jŏvis.

4. Tempöre in such expressions as ex eo, ex illo, sc. ex eo tempöre, ex illo tempöre.

5. Filius, filia uxor; as, Faustus Sullæ, sc. filius; Cæcilia Metelli, sc. filia.

6. Dīcam; as, Quid multa? Quid plura? Ne plura, sc. dicam; Quid? sc. censes or ais; Quid tum, sc. sequitur.

7. Dent or vēlint in wishes; as, Di meliora! sc. dent or vēlint.

8. Aio, dico, inquit; as, hic ego, sc. dīco or aio; tum ille, sc. inquit.

9. The verb est in the compound tenses; as, amātus, sc. est; doctūrus, sc. esse, etc.

10. Existente and existentībūs; as, te iudice, sc. existente; Lepido et Tullo consulibus, sc. existentībūs.

106. What further is comprehended under ellipsis?

Under ellipsis are comprehended:

1. ASYNDETON, the omission of conjunctions; as, vēni, vīdi, vīci, sc. et.

2. ZEUGMA, the connection of two nouns or two infinitives with a single verb which is applicable to only one of them; as, pācem an bellum gērens, where gērens is applicable only to bellum, and āgens must be supplied to pācem.

3. SYLLEPSIS, the agreement of an adjective or a verb with one of several nouns when it belongs to all; as, sociis et rēge recepto; ille niger, tu candida esses.

4. SYNECHDOCHE, the accusative of the part affected instead of the ablative; as, os humerosque deo similis; explēri mentem nequit.

107. What is pleonasm?

PLEONASM, superfluity, is the use of more words than are necessary to express the meaning; as, sic ōre locūta est.

108. What is comprehended under pleonasm?

1. POLYSYNDETON, the use of unnecessary conjunctions; as, ūna Eurūsq̄ue Notūsq̄ue ruunt.

2. HENDIADYS (one-by-two), the connection of two nouns by et, when the latter serves the part of an adjective; as, poculum et aurum (aureum), a gold cup.

3. PERIPHRAISIS, a roundabout mode of expression; as, tenēri fœtus ovium (agni), lambs.

109. What is enalläge?

ENALLAGE is a change or substitution of one word or part of speech for another.

110. What are included under enalläge?

1. Antimeria, the use of one part of speech for another; as, nostrum vivere for nostra vita; conjugium for conjux.

2. Heterōsis, the use of one form of a noun, pronoun, or verb for another; as, Romānus victor for Romāni victōres; sustulērat for sustulisset.

3. Antiptōsis, the use of one case for another; as, cui nunc cognōmen Iūlo for Iulus.

4. Synēsis or Synthēsis, a construction according to the sense of the words, grammar being disregarded; as, pars in crūcem acti; vox mea qui clāmo.

5. Anacolūthon, in irregularity of construction, in which the last part of a sentence is not in harmony with the first.

111. What is hyperbăton?

HYPERBATON is a transgression of the usual order of words or clauses.

112. What are included under hyperbăton?

Hyperbăton includes:

1. Anastrophe, an inversion of the order of two words; as, collo dare brachia circum for circumdare, etc.; nox erit una super for supererit.

2. Hysteron protēron (the first last), a reversion of the natural order of the sense; as, Moriāmur et in media arma ruāmus; vălet atque vivit.

3. Hypalläge, an interchange of constructions; as, dare classibus Austris for dare classes Austris.

4. Tmesis (a cutting), separating the parts of a compound word; as, Septem subjecta triōni gens for Septemtriōni; quæ me cunque vōcant terræ for quæcunque. (See No. 1, circumdare.)

113. What is an Archaism, and what a Hellenism?

1. An ARCHAISM is an ancient form of construction; as, opĕram abutitur for opĕrā.

2. A HELLENISM is a Greek construction; as, abstinĕto irārum for īris.

DIFFERENT KINDS OF METRE.

114. Under what general heads may the different kinds of metre be classed?

The different kinds of Latin metre may be classed under Iambic, Trochaic, Dactylic, and Choriambic metres.

115. From what do these get their names?

Iambic, Trochaic, Dactylic, and Choriambic metres get their names from the prevailing foot used in each. These are also further distinguished by the number of feet used; also by some peculiarity either in the beginning or end of the verse; sometimes from the name of a poet who invented or used a particular species of verse.

116. Mention some of the terms used to mark these distinctions.

1. Verses are named from the number of metres they contain; as,

Monomĕter, consisting of one metre, or measure;

Dimĕter, consisting of two metres, or measures;

Trimĕter, consisting of three metres, or measures;

Tetramĕter, four; Pentamĕter, five; Hexamĕter, six; Heptamĕter, seven, etc.

2. From some peculiarity in their structure; as,

Acatalectic, when complete;

Catalectic, when a syllable is wanting at the end;

Brachycatalectic, when a foot is wanting at the end;

Hypercatalectic, when there is a superfluous syllable or foot;

Acephalous, when a syllable is wanting at the beginning.

3. From the name of some celebrated poet; as,
Alcaic, from Alcæus, of Lesbos;
Alcmanian, from Alcman or Alcmaeon, of Sparta;
Archilochian, from Archilochus, of Paros;
Asclepiadic, from Asclepiades, a Greek lyric poet;
Pherecratic, from Pherecrates, of Athens;
Sapphic, from Sappho, a poetess of Lesbos;
Adonic, the verse employed by the Greeks in lamentations for Adonis.

117. In naming a verse, how many terms are necessary?

In naming a verse three terms are necessary;

1. The species or kind of verse; as, iambic, dactylic, choriambic, etc.
2. The number of metres; as, dimeter, trimeter, tetrameter, etc.
3. The ending or beginning; as, catalectic, acephalous, etc.

NOTE.—1. When there is no irregularity (3) need not be named.

2. A well-known verse is often simply named; as, Sapphic, Adonic, hexameter, etc.

118. In what kinds of verse do two feet constitute a metre, or measure?

In iambic, trochaic, and anapæstic verses two feet constitute a metre; in the other kinds of verse a single foot is a metre.

119. Why has anapæstic verse not been included in the kinds of verse already enumerated? (114.)

No specimen of anapæstic verse has been found in the Latin writers of a purer age.

120. What is meant by isochrönous feet?

Isochrönous (equal-timed) feet are such as are capable of being divided into parts which are equal to each other in time. Thus a spondee is isochrönous with a dactyl or an anapæst (◡ ◡ -), and an iambus or a trochee with a tribrach (◡ ◡ ◡); but an iambus and a trochee are not isochrönous, because they can not be divided so as to have the corresponding parts equal in time; thus,

Isoch. {	Spond.,	- -	Spond.,	- ◡ -	Iamb.,	◡ -	Troch.,	- ◡
	Dactyl,	- ◡ ◡	Anap.,	◡ ◡ -	Tribr.,	◡ ◡ ◡	Tribr.,	◡ ◡ ◡

Not isochrönous. { Iambus, ◡ | -
 Trochee, - | ◡

Isochrönous feet are interchangeable with each other; that is, one can take the place of another in certain kinds of verse—especially dactylic, iambic, and anapæstic.

A pure iambic consists entirely of iambs; as,

But in order to vary the rhythm and for ease in composition other feet were afterward admitted, especially the spondee in the odd places, and then other feet (not always isochronous); as in the following scheme and examples:

NOTE.—For more examples, see the Epodes of Horace.

123. How many kinds of metre does Horace use?

Horace uses twenty different kinds of metre, either separately or combined.

124. In what metre are his Satires and Epistles written?

The Satires and Epistles of Horace are written in dactylic hexameter. (117.)

125. Name by classes the nineteen other kinds of verse he uses.

The nineteen other kinds of verse Horace uses are,

126. What is to be understood by a posteriore and a priore in dactylic measure?

A posteriore means the last four feet of a hexameter, and a priore, the first four feet.

127. Describe the metres of Horace more particularly, as they are used separately or combined, and exemplify them by verses.

Taking the Odes of Horace in the order in which we find them, we have,

I. Single lines: Asclepiadic choriambic tetrameter; consisting of a spondee, two choriambi, and an iambus; as,

Mācē | nās ātāvīs | ēdītē rē | gībūs.—(Bk. I. 1.)

Or, as the cæsural pause in this measure falls at the end of the first choriambus, it may be scanned as a dactylic pentameter, with a cæsural syllable after the first dactyl; as,

Mācē | nās ātā | vīs | ēdītē | rēgībūs.

The first method is the most approved.

II. Stanzas of four lines: the three first are Sapphic, consisting of five feet; a trochee, a spondee, a dactyl, and two trochees: the fourth is Adonic, consisting of a dactyl and a spondee; as,

1. Jām sǎ | tīs tēr | rīs nīvis | ātquē | dīrǎ
2. Grāndī | nīs mī | sīt pătēr, | ēt, rū | bēntě (See 52.)
3. Dēxtēr | ā sǎ | crās jācū | lātūs | ārcēs,
4. Tērrūt | ūrbēm. (Bk. I. 2.)

III. Stanzas of two lines: the first, Choriambic trimeter or Glyconic, consisting of a spondee, a choriambus, and an iambus; the second is Asclepiadic choriambic (I.); as,

1. Sīc tē | dīvā pōtēns | Cŷprī,
2. Sīc frā | trēs Hēllēnā | lūcidā sīd | ěrā.—(Bk. I. 3.)

IV. Stanzas of two lines: the first is called Archilochian heptameter, and consists of a Dactylic tetrameter a priore (the first four feet of a dactylic hexameter, the fourth being always a dactyl) and three trochees. The second is Iambic trimeter, catalectic, consisting of six iambs (spondees being admitted into the odd feet, first and third, but not the fifth) and a catalectic syllable; as,

1. Sōlvītūr | ācrīs hī | ēms grā | tā vīcē | vērīs | ēt Fǎ | vōnī.
2. Trāhūnt | quē sīc | cās mā | chīnā | cārī | nās.
7. Āltēr | nō tēr | rām quātī | ūnt pēdē | dūm grā | vēs Cŷ | clōpūm.
8. Vūlcā | nūs ār | dēns ūr | ĭt ōf | fīcī | nās.—(Bk. I. 4.)

V. Stanzas of four lines: the two first are Asclepiadic (I.), the third is Choriambic trimeter catalectic, or Pherecratian; consisting of a spondee, two choriambi, and a catalectic syllable; the fourth is Glyconic (III.); as,

1. Quīs mūl | tā grācīlīs | tē pūr in | rōsā
2. Pērfū | sūs līquīdīs | ūrgēt ōdōr | ĭbūs
3. Grātō | Pŷrrhā, sūb ān | trō?
4. Cuī flā | vām rēlīgās | cōmām.—(Bk. I. 5.)

VI. Stanzas of four lines: the three first are Asclepiadic (I.), the fourth is Glyconic (III.); as,

1. Scrībē | rīs Vārīō | fōrtīs ēt hōs | tīūm
2. Vīctōr | Mǎōnīī | cārminīs āl | ĭtē,
3. Quām rēm | cūnquē fērōx | nāvībūs aūt | ěquīs
4. Mīlēs, | tē dūcē gēs | sērīt.—(Bk. I. 6.)

VII. Stanzas of two lines: the first is Dactylic hexameter (I.), the second Dactylic tetrameter a posteriore, that is, the last four feet of a Dactylic hexameter; as,

1. Laūdā | būnt ālī | ī clā | rām Rhōdōn | aūt Mītý | lēnēn,
2. Aūt Ēphē | sōn bīmā | rīsvē Cō | rīnthī.
3. Īnsīg | nēs aūt | Thēssālā | Tēmpē.—(Bk. I. 7.)

VIII. Stanzas of two lines: the first is Choriambic dimeter, consisting of a choriambus and a bacchius (∪ —); the second is Choriambic tetrameter, altered, the first foot being an epitritus secundus (— ∪ —) instead of a choriambus; the last foot is a bacchius; as,

1. Lýdīā dīc, | pēr ōmnēs
2. Tē dēōs ō | rō, Sýbārīn | cūr prōpērās | āmāndō.—(Bk. I. 8.)

IX. Stanzas of four lines: the first two are Greater Dactylic Alcaic, consisting of a spondee or an iambus, an iambus, a cæsural syllable, a choriambus, and an iambus, or the last two feet may be dactyls; the third line is Iambic dimeter hypercatalectic, or Archilochian, consisting of an iambus or spondee, an iambus, a spondee, an iambus, and an additional syllable; the fourth is Lesser Dactylic Alcaic, and consists of two dactyls and two trochees; as,

1. Vīdēs | ūt āl | tā | stēt nīvē cān | dīdūm, or
2. Sōrāc | tē nēc | jān | sūstīnē | ānt ōnūs
3. Silvā | lābō | rāntēs | gēlū | qūe,
4. Flūmīnā | cōnstītē | rīnt ā | cūtō.—(Bk. I. 9.)

NOTE.—This is Horace's favorite stanza, and is therefore called the Horatian Stanza.

X. Single lines: Choriambic pentameter, or Greater Asclepiad, consisting of a spondee, three choriambi, and an iambus; as,

Tū nē | quāsiērīs | scīrē nēfās | quēm mīhī quēm | tībī.—(Bk. I. 11.)

XI. Stanzas of two lines: the first is Iambic dimeter acephalous, consisting of a long syllable and three iambs; the second is Iambic trimeter catalectic (IV.); as,

1. Nōn | ēbūr | nēqu' aū | rēūm
2. Mēā | rēnī | dēt īn | dōmō | lēcū | nār.—(Bk. II. 18.)

XII. Single lines: Ionic a minore, consisting of four feet of that measure (˘ ˘ - -), (see 125); as,

Mīsērār' ēst | nēqu' āmōrī | dārē lūdūm | nēquē dūlcī.—(Bk. III. 12.)

XIII. Stanzas of two lines: the first is Dactylic hexameter (I.); the second Dactylic trimeter catalectic, consisting of two dactyls and a catalectic syllable; as,

1. Diffū | gērē nī | vēs rēdē | ūnt jān | grāmīnā | cāmpīs.

2. Ārbōrī | būsquē cō | mē.—(Bk. IV. 7.)

XIV. Stanzas of two lines: the first is Iambic trimeter (Senarius), consisting of six iambs, but admitting a spondee in the odd places, or a foot equivalent to an iambus or a spondee in any place but the last; the second is Iambic dimeter, consisting of four iambs, and subject to the same law of substitution; as,

Ībīs | Lībūr | nīs īn | tēr āl | tā nāv | iūm.

Āmī | cē prō | pūgnāc | ūlā.—(Epod. 1.)

XV. Stanzas of two lines: the first is Iambic trimeter (XIV.); the second is sometimes read as two lines, but may be scanned as one: the first part as a Dactylic trimeter catalectic (XIII.), and the second as an Iambic dimeter, consisting of four iambs (XIV.) This metre is styled Dactylico-iambic.

1. Pētī | nīhīl | mē sīc | ūt ānt | ēā | jūvāt.

2. Scrībērē | vērsicū | lōs || āmō | rē pēr | cūssūm | grāvī.—(Epod. 11.)

XVI. Stanzas of two lines; the first is Dactylic hexameter (I.); the second is sometimes read as two lines, but always scanned in two parts,—the first Iambic dimeter (XIV.), the second Dactylic trimeter catalectic (XV.) This metre is styled Iambico-dactylic, and is the reverse of the former.

1. Hōrrīdā | tēmpēs | tās cōl | ūm cōn | trāxīt ēt | īmbrēs.

4. Ōcā | sīō | nēm dē | dīē || dūmquē vī | rēnt gēnū | ā.—(Epod. 13.)

XVII. Stanzas of two lines: the first is Dactylic hexameter (I.); the second Iambic dimeter (XV.); as,

1. Nōx ērāt | ēt cōl | ō fūl | gēbāt | lūnā sē | rēnō.

Īntēr | mīnōr | ā sī | dērā.—(Epod. 15.)

XVIII. Stanzas of two lines: the first is Dactylic hexameter (I.); the second Iambic trimeter (XIV.); as,

1. Ālterā | jān tērī | tūr bāl | līs cīv | īlībūs | āētās.
2. Sūīs | ēt īp | sū Rō | mǎ vīr | ībūs | rūīt.—(Epod. 16.)

XIX. Single lines: Iambic trimeter; as,

- Jām jān | āffī | cācī | dō mǎnūs | scīēn | tīā.—(Epod. 17.)

FROM THE SIGNIFICATION.

- I. What nouns denote a he are masculine,
But every she as female we decline.

(Exc.) Some offices of men we female make,
And from the ending the right gender take :
Excubiæ, opëra, also copiæ,
Vigiliæ, curia, and custodiæ.
Prostitütum, scortum, servitium, we have
As neuters, though meaning a female or slave.

- II. Months, rivers, winds, and mountains pass for he's,
Trees, countries, cities, isles, and herbs are she's,
With gems, and ships that sail the seas.

(Exc. 1) Call räbus, dūmus males, and trees in ster,
Trees neuter are in ur, and um, and er.

(Exc. 2) What hills or rivers end in a
Are mostly fem'nine, except Adria.

(Exc. 3) Cities in i and o, and Agrägäs
Are males; but ur and um for neuters pass.

(Exc. 4) Cities ending in us of the third, we do name
As males; Sason, Tunes, and Tecmon, the same.

(Exc. 5) Those sing'lar in i, and a plural, are neuter;
And so we decline Gadir, Argos, and Tuder.

- III. Some nouns there are a general sense which have,
Denote each sex, and so both genders crave :
Conjux atque pärens, infans, patruëlis, hæres,
Affinis, vindex, jūdex, dux, mīles, et hostis,
Augur et antistes, martyr, convīva, sacerdos,
Municepsque, vātes, adolescens, cīvis et auctor,
Custos, præes, cōmes, testis, sus, bosque, cānisque.

- IV. The following nouns which in order we touch on,
Are common in sense, but not so in construction :

Advēna, coelicōla, cliens, assecla, camēlus,
Transvēna, ruricōla, cocles, alienagēnaque
Agricōla, jūvēnis, obses opifexque, lanista,
Eques, exul, nēmo et index, aurīga, latroque
Homicīda, princeps et paricīda, indigēnaque
Interpres, hospes, lixa, cum pūgil, hōmoque,
Pēdes et pincerna, præsul, fur, rabūla, sēnex.

FROM THE ENDING—FIRST DECLENSION.

- V. The First declension ends in a ;
Each noun is feminine, as hæc mūsa.

(Exc.) Planēta, comēta, though ending in a,
Have hic, pascha hoc ; doubtful talpa, dāma.

SECOND DECLENSION.

- VI. The Second ends in er, ir, ur, and us,
And should be masculine, like domīnus.

VII. Greek nouns in us are mostly feminine found,
With alvus, the belly, and hūmus, the ground ;
Together with cōlus, a woman's distaff,
And vannus, a fan to winnow out chaff.

VIII. All nouns in um with neuters place,
And substantives that vary in no case ;
Add vīrus, juice or poison, and pelāgus, the sea,
But vulgus hic et hoc its gender claims to be.

IX. Pampīnus and grossus, barbītus, camēlus,
Balānus and atōmus, together with phasēlus,
Are masculine or feminine, so the grammars tell us.

THIRD DECLENSION.

X. The Third has males in er, or, os, n, o;
Long words are feminine in do and go.

- (Exc. 1) Hoc spinther, ver, ūter, gingīber, lāver,
And ūber and tūber, and sīser, papāver,
And cīcer, and pīper, lāser, cadāver.
- (Exc. 2) Cor, ador, æquor, os, and marmor
Are neuter; hæc, dos, cos, and arbor.
- (Exc. 3) Hoc inguen and glūten, with pollen and unguen;
Hæc aëdon, halcyon, īcon and sindon.
- (Exc. 4) Grando, cāro and hālo are feminine too;
But harpāgo the masculine claims as its due.

XI. Third nouns in io mostly hæc procure,
With as, aus, es, is, x, and s impure.

- (Exc. 1) Nouns ending in io which numbers express,
Or substance, material, are males without guess.
- (Exc. 2) As, assis, and nouns in as—antis hic name;
Vas, vassis, and nouns in as—atis, hoc claim.
- (Exc. 3) Cacoëthes not varied with all of this stock,
And nepenthes, aes, panāces, always have hoc.

XII. A number excepted in es, is, s, x,
Are males; for example, rex, phœnix, bombyx.

- (a) Rex, phœnix, bombyx, chālybs, vārix,
Grex, vortex, sōrex, volvox, cālix :
- (b) Gryps, cespes, tradux, līmes, ensis,
Glis, fōmes, torris, gurgēs, mensis :
- (c) Cenchris, vēpres, vermis, vertex,
Bes, callis, caulis, fustis, vērvox :

- (d) Mons, spādix, rūdens, vectis, follis,
Pons, tērmes, axis, tāpes, collis,
Mugīlis, fornix, lēbes, pollis :
- (e) Liēnis, urpex, sentis, āpex,
Dens, orbis, frūtex, torris, lātex :
- (f) Pes, palmes, pōples, stīpes, trāmes,
And paries, caudex, tūdes, āmes :
- (g) Seps, unguis, magnes, sanguis, pūlex,
So pōdex, mūrex, hydrops, cūlex :
- (h) Acināces, postis, piscis, fascis,
Fons, coccyx, lāpis, cīmex, cassis :
- (i) All nouns in nis, with onyx, stōrax,
Cucūmis, natrix, vōmis, thōrax :
- (j) And rūmex, mērops, nefrens, ōryx,
So hallux, hallex, cōdex, pollex.

XIII. The poets these for males or females take,
Just as it serves their turn for verses' sake :
Lynx, būbo, perdix, also fīnis,
Calx, limax, ōbex, torques, cīnis,
Scrobs, pulvis, clūnis, pūmex, sandyx,
Canālis, corbis, ādeps, imbrex,
Stirps, grus, et sīlex, anguis cortex.

XIV. Nouns ending in e, a, l, e, t (calet), ar, men, ur, and us,
May with the neuter kind be placed by us.

- (Exc. 1) Uris, utis, and udis, from us, we design,
If more than one syllable, with hæc to decline.
- (Exc. 2) Sol, turtur, sālar, mus, and trīpus,
With furfur, vultur, sal, and lepus,
Are always masculine with us.

NOTE.—Sal is masculine in the plural.

FOURTH DECLENSION.

XV. The Fourth in us are chiefly masculine;
 But nouns in u as neuters we decline;
Porticus, tribus, mānus, are feminine,
 With cōlus, fīcus, dōmus; but these three
 Both of the Second and the Fourth may be;
Cupressus, cornus, pīnus, such you'll see.

(Exc.) Pēnus, provision, and spēcus, a cave,
 May both declensions and all genders have.

XVI. Pampīnus, grossus, barbītus, camēlus,
Balānus, cōlus, atōmus, phasēlus,
 Are males or females—so the learned tell us:
Hoc vīrus, chaos, pelāgus, and mēlos.
Hic aut hoc vulgus the language doth show,
 And chaos has always the ablative chao.

FIFTH DECLENSION.

XVII. The Fifth are feminine, and end in es;
 But one is masculine—meridies.

(Exc.) In the singular as doubtful is dies declined,
 But masculine only in the plural we find.

Amplifico,	amplificĕre,	amplificĕvi,	amplificĕtum,	to enlarge.
Gratificor,	gratificĕri,	gratificĕtus sum (dep.),		to gratify.

Pario, when compounded, changes a into e, and becomes of the fourth conjugation, but has perui in the perfect, except comperio and reperio, which have peri; as,

PRESENT.	INFINITIVE.	PERFECT.	SUPINE.
Aperio,	aperĭre,	aperui,	apertum,	to open.
Comperio,	comperĭre,	comperi,	compertum,	to know for certain.
Reperio,	reperĭre,	repĕri,	repertum,	to find.

The compounds of quatio take the form cutio, and have cussi, cussum; as,

PRESENT.	INFINITIVE.	PERFECT.	SUPINE.
Concutio,	concutĕre,	concussi,	concussum,	to shake violently.
Percutio,	percutĕre,	percussi,	percussum,	to strike.

How are the perfect and supine of ferio supplied?

The perfect and supine of ferio are supplied from percutio, to strike: percussi, percutsum.

DEPONENT VERBS.

FIRST CONJUGATION.

Are there any irregularities in the conjugation of deponent verbs of the first conjugation?

All deponent verbs of the first conjugation are regular, and are conjugated like the passive voice of amo; as,

PRESENT.	INFINITIVE.	PERFECT.
Adulor,	adulāri,	adulātus,	to flatter.
Cōnor,	conāri,	conātus,	to endeavor.
Mīror,	mirāri,	mirātus,	to admire.
Suspīcor,	suspīcāri,	suspīcātus,	to suspect.

SECOND CONJUGATION.

Conjugate the following deponent verbs of the second conjugation, irregular in the perfect participle:

PRESENT.	INFINITIVE.	PERFECT PARTICIPLE.
Fateor,	fatēri,	fassus,	to confess.
Liceor,	licēri,	licītus,	to bid a price.
Medeor,	medēri,	—	to cure.
Mereor,	merēri,	merītus,	to deserve.
Misereor,	miserēri,	miserītus, or misertus,	to pity.

PRESENT.	INFINITIVE.	PERFECT.
Quëror,	quëri,	questus,	to complain.
Sëquor,	sëqui,	secutus,	to follow.
Ulciscor,	ulcisci,	ultus,	to avenge, punish.
Utor,	ütì,	usus,	to use.

What is to be remarked of the compounds of apiscor?

Adispicor and indipiscor, to obtain, make the perfect participle adeptus, indeptus.

What is to be remarked of morior and nascor?

The future participles of morior and nascor have iturus; as, moriturus, nasciturus.

Conjugate the following verbs, which want the perfect participle:

PRESENT.	INFINITIVE.
Defitiscor,	defitisci,	to be weary.
Irascor,	irasci,	to be angry.
Liquor,	liqui,	to melt.
Reminiscor,	reminisci,	to remember.
Ringor,	ringi,	to grin like a dog.
Vescor.	vesci,	to feed.

FOURTH CONJUGATION.

Conjugate the following deponent verbs of the fourth conjugation, irregular in the perfect participle:

PRESENT.	INFINITIVE.	PERFECT.
Assentior,	assentiri,	assensus,	to assent.
Experior,	experiri,	expertus,	to try.
Mëtior,	metiri,	ensus,	to measure.

Ordior,	ordiri,	orsus,	to begin.
Orior,	oriri,	ortus,	to rise.

What is to be remarked of orior?

Orior in some of its parts belongs to the fourth conjugation, and in others to the third. Its future participle is oriturus.

THINGS USEFUL TO BE KNOWN.

ROMAN ARMY.

- 1 Century = 100 men.
- 2 Centuries = 200 men = 1 Maniple.
- 3 Maniples = 600 men = 1 Cohort.
- 10 Cohorts = 6,000 men = 1 Legion.

The Century was seldom full, so that the Legion usually consisted of less than 6,000 men. Ordinarily it was between 3,000 and 5,000, or about 4,000 men.

- 1 Decuria = 10 horsemen.
- 3 Decuriæ = 30 horsemen = 1 Turma.
- 10 Turmæ = 300 horsemen = the Cavalry of a Legion.

The Velites were light-armed troops, who fought in scattered parties as occasion demanded, usually in front of the lines, and were the first to engage.

A Consular Army consisted of 2 Legions, together with the allied horse and foot; in all about 20,000 men.

In time of battle the army was drawn up in three lines:

1. The Hastati, young men in the flower of life;
2. The Principes, men of middle age, in the vigor of life;
3. The Triarii, old soldiers of approved valor.

The Centurio Primi Pili, or simply Primus Pilus, was the chief centurion.

A Decurio was the commander of 10 horsemen.

The Dux Turmæ commanded the whole body of horsemen.

The Præfectus was commander of the allies.

A Military Tribune commanded about 1,000 men.

The Quæstor was the treasurer and paymaster of the army.

The whole army was commanded by a Consul in person, or by his lieutenant-general, called a Legatus.

The Prætorium was the general's tent.

The Cohors Prætoria was the general's body-guard.

Exercitus is the army in camp, or in general.

Agmen, the army on the march.

Acies, the army drawn up for battle.

The camp had four gates. The two principal ones were:

1. The Porta Prætoria, in front, toward the enemy;
2. The Porta Decumana, at the back, from the enemy.

TIME.

1. DAY AND NIGHT.

The Romans divided the day, from sunrise to sunset, into twelve hours.

They divided the night, from sunset to sunrise, into four watches.

2. MONTHS.

The Romans did not divide their months into weeks, but reckoned by Kalends, Nones, and Ides. Nor did they reckon forward, as we do, but backward; that is, in reckoning from the Kalends to the Nones they said it was so many days before the Nones; from the Nones to the Ides, so many days before the Ides; and from the Ides to the end of the month, so many days before the Kalends of the next month.

The Kalends were the first day of the month.

The Nones the fifth; nine days before the Nones (including both).

The Ides the thirteenth, which nearly divided the month into two equal parts.

But in March, May, July, and October the Nones fell two days later: that is, on the 7th; consequently, in the same months, the Ides fell on the 15th.

The day before each of these divisions was called Pridie; thus the 4th of January was called pridie nonas Januarii; the 14th of March, pridie ides Martii; and the 31st of October, pridie kalendas Novembris.

To turn Roman time into ours, if the day be between the Kalends and the Nones, or between the Nones and Ides:

RULE.—Add 1 to the latter division, and subtract the given day.

Example: What is the 4th day before the Nones of January?

(Nones) $5 + 1 = 6$, and $6 - 4 = 2$ d of January. Ans.

What is the 7th day before the Ides of March?

(Ides) $15 + 1 = 16$, and $16 - 7 = 9$ th of March. Ans.

If the day be between the Ides and the Kalends:

RULE.—Add 2 to the number of days in the month named, and subtract the given day.

Example: What is the 10th day before the Kalends of January?

(January) $31 + 2 = 33$, and $33 - 10 = 23$ d of December. Ans.

What is the 12th day before the Kalends of September?

(September) $30 + 2 = 32$, and $32 - 12 = 20$ th of August. Ans.

A Lustrum was a period of five years.

ROMAN MONEY.

An As, a copper coin, was worth about 1 cent 5 mills.

A Sestertius, silver, was worth about . . 3 cents 8 mills.

A Denarius, silver, was worth about . 15 cents 5 mills.

NOTE.—A Sestertius was a coin; a Sestertium, a sum of money = 1,000 Sestertii = $38.

Large sums were usually reckoned by Sestertia.

MEASURES.

A Passus was about five feet.

A Roman Mile (Mille Passus) = 5,000 feet, a little less than our mile (5,280 feet).

A Jugerum was about five eighths of an acre.

AMERICAN STANDARD SCHOOL SERIES.

A MANUAL

OF THE

ART OF PROSE COMPOSITION,

By JOHN M. BONNELL, D. D.

In the preparation of this work, it has been no part of the compiler's aim to be original. He has sought rather to select from the various treatises on this subject those rules and exercises which have been approved by the experience of teachers, and to combine them into one consistent whole, arranged with reference to the progressive development of the learner's powers.—Extract from the Preface.

The author disclaims originality, and yet is more original than nine tenths of less modest writers. The volume bears evident marks of being the work of a practical and experienced teacher. As a whole it comes nearer to our idea of what a manual on this subject should be for the ordinary classes of students in our Academies and High Schools than any other that we have seen.—American Educational Monthly, New York, March, 1868.

The result of practical thought in the class-room, it is precisely such a series of illustrations and views of the subject as most teachers have found it necessary to prepare for themselves.—The Round Table, New York, March, 1868.

It is a capital work in plan and execution, and worthy of introduction into our best institutions of learning.—N. Lawrence Lindsley, Lebanon, Tenn.

It is just the book that is needed in our schools. It is admirable for its conciseness, its comprehensiveness, the accuracy of its definitions, and the appropriateness of its examples.—W. Shelton, President West Tennessee College.

I consider it an admirable compilation. The arrangement of the whole work is philosophical, and the chapters on Invention and Expression are very complete.—Charles Taylor, President Kentucky Wesleyan University.

A treatise well calculated to serve as a text-book in schools and colleges, and at the same time just such a guide as very many of our young professional and business men greatly need.—J. Berrien Lindsley, Chancellor University of Nashville.

I am very well pleased with it. The plan is excellent, and I think the execution well sustained.—John A. Waddell, LL. D., Chancellor University of Mississippi.

A text-book of rare merit.—R. D. Mallory, Union Female Academy, Eufaula, Ala.
I have long wanted just such a help in the school-room.—A. L. Hamilton, Pres't Andrew Female College, Cuthbert, Ga.

We consider it superior to any other work of the kind which has ever come under our notice.—Georgie A. Hulse McLeod, Southern Literary Institute, Baltimore.

It is decidedly the most complete and exhaustive treatise that I have seen.—W. H. Stuart, Columbia, Ky.

It is expressly prepared for use in all Schools, Academies, and Colleges, Male and Female; and also with particular reference to Private Readers and Learners.

ITS COMPARATIVE MERITS.

I. An examination of its contents and their arrangement will enable one to institute a comparison between this work and all others on the same subject.

II. It is in perfect harmony with what is known of all that is NATURAL, HUMAN, and DIVINE.

III. Its foundations are deeply laid in the Philosophy of Mind and Voice—Spirit and Matter; and the principles are of a far-reaching and comprehensive nature.

IV. Its method is that of ANALYSIS and SYNTHESIS, and is altogether progressive and practical in its characteristics.

V. Although but ONE Elocutionary principle is presented, specifically, on any page, yet each Elementary page contains, incidentally, ALL the principles of Elocution.

VI. These principles have never been known to fail, when faithfully applied, to enable one to read and speak, for hours in succession, without hoarseness or injurious exhaustion.

VII. It is beautifully and substantially gotten up in octavo form, of between three and four hundred pages, and includes a greater variety of Prose and Poetry than any other system of Elocution, and contains double the amount of reading matter found in any similar work in the United States.

The FIRST PRINCIPLES OF GEOLOGY,

PRESENTING THE SCIENCE IN ITS PHYSICAL AND MORAL ASPECTS,
AND EXHIBITING ITS APPLICATION TO THE ARTS OF MINING, AGRICULTURE, ARCHITECTURE, AND ENGINEERING.

By WILLIAM J. BARBEE, A. M., M. D.

MEMBER OF THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE PROMOTION OF SCIENCE.

The work is illustrated with Engravings, and a Geological Map of the United States. It is divided into five parts:

PART I. contains an account of the Elements of the Globe—their combinations to form Mineral substances; and presents an Exposition of Geological Dynamics. PART II. contains a Classification of Rocks, and a Description of the different Formations. PART III. treats of the Moral Bearings of Geology. PART IV. treats of Geographical Geology. PART V. exhibits the Application of Geology to certain useful Arts.

The following, among numerous testimonials, are presented for the inspection of Teachers:

It evinces a thorough knowledge of the science, and is admirably adapted to schools and colleges.—President Hitchcock.

I can cheerfully commend it to all who desire an accurate knowledge of the general principles of Geology. I hope the work will be a success.—President Barnard, University of Mississippi.

The author displays profound acquaintance with his favorite department of science and a masterly ability for logical discussion.—Southern Literary Messenger.

Dr. BARBEE has written what very few men have ever attempted—an able and interesting work on Geology. Able works there were, but scarcely any of them attractive.—Christian Intelligencer.

One of the best books on Geology ever issued from any press in Europe or America.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

The subjects are all treated with marked ability.—National Quarterly Review.

A most excellent Southern college text-book. May the number of such increase.—DeBow's Review.

We need not look to the North, nor to England, for text-books, when the South can produce such a work as Dr. BARBEE has prepared.—Nashville Medical Journal.

In treating the Moral Bearings of the science the author presents ten strong arguments for the antiquity of the globe—shows there is no conflict between Scripture and Geology, and directs attention to the proofs of Divine goodness and wisdom.—Princeton Review.

One of the most logical works on Geology we ever perused.—N. Y. Churchman.

I very fully approve of your work on Geology, and will soon give it an extended notice.—T. Fanning, President of Franklin College, Tennessee.

The new edition of Dr. BARBEE'S work on Geology is an able and interesting treatise.—P. S. Fall, Nashville. Tenn.

It is the best book of the kind I have seen; remarkable for clearness and simplicity of style, and admirably suited for the use of schools.—Prof. I. H. Alexander, Kosciusko, Miss.

It is a most excellent text-book. The style is pure, and the arrangement faultless.—Prof. I. L. Dyson, Lexington, Miss.

It is a capital book, and I wish to see it introduced in our schools.—President T. S. Gathright, of Somerville Institute.

I like it better than Hitchcock, and will introduce it next session.—Prof. S. J. Reid, of Holly Springs, Miss.

I am greatly pleased with BARBEE'S GEOLOGY, and expect to introduce it as a text-book in our school.—R. T. P. Allen, Sup't Military Institute, Kentucky.
